Sleeping with the Enemy Kaitlyn O'Connor

Someone was terra-forming Venus and it certainly wasn't anyone native to the solar system! First Lieutenant Sybil Hunter was dispatched with her crew to discover what was going on. She'd expected the possibility of being shot down if it was aliens, as everyone thought. She'd expected the possibility that her and her crew might be taken captive. She hadn't expected to find herself sleeping with mankind's enemy, but from the moment she met Commander Anka l'Kartay, she was mesmerized. How could the perfect man she'd waited for all her life turn out not to be a man at all, but a feril, an alien, perceived by everyone but her as the enemy of mankind? Rating: Carnal, adult situations and language. Genre: Futuristic Romance.

Sarah says

In a twist this story takes place in the NOT so distant future, about 2028 I think it was. Sybil and a team of four others are sent from the space station on the moon (which not only has the space station at this point but has also been colonized) to check out the "lights" that have appeared on and around Venus. The "lights" turn out to be from alien spaceships, the alien's them selves have ventured from there home planet and are working on transforming Venus into a habitable planet for their own colonization.

I really enjoyed this book though the misunderstandings started to annoy after awhile. 4 stars

Patti Ashley says

Full of stilted dialogue

This book begins very slowly full of scientific jargon, often out of context to what is going on. The story appears to move through dialogue which is stilted and shook boring.

THIS WAS CUTE, PASSIONATE, IT'S SCI-FI AND IT'S A CONNOR BOOK! WHATS NOT TO LIKE?

OUR HERO is an alien, who looks more like a humanoid cat. He has lost his entire family, his lover and their children, so he's quite bitter about life but not a recluse or dejected...merely trying his best to rebuild a life for him and his men. Apparently his kind were at odds with humans, especially Americans in this story and it began with the capture of our heroine and her space crew. Anka plotted a devious plan to seduce our beautiful heroine but the lines become blurred when his personal feelings become involved. To him, their encounter was supposed to be a political cat and mouse game filled with sex, and that made the whole story a little bit more ANGSTY because we don't know for sure what's going on in his mind and who he will choose in the end. Duty or Love?

OUR HEROINE (I didn't pay much attention to all the plot building, so pardon me if I'm not too sure about what her job was or what all their political antagonism is about) was attracted to her alien captor the moment she laid eyes on him and when sex becomes more...she's caught in between the mistrust and fragile treaty of the man she loves and her own race. Oh and did I mention shes a 28 year old virgin? Bonus! I am a sucker for virgin heroines lol.

OVERALL this started a bit slow to me but I started to become more invested when the H/h finally meets and the sparks flew. From then on, it was filled with passion, a little push and pull angst and also some political riff raff. Although the ending could have been more FINAL instead of making me feel like it got cut off and I didn't really know if they ended up playing house together or not despite their baby's birth.

Brutally Honest says

Gosh, I would have loved this book if it had had a few more chapters. The ending was way too abrupt. I wanted more :)

Ladyacct says

Original story idea, but too much science and politics for me. I will read more from the author, this was loaned to me by a friend who LOVES her.

Sonya Tedesco says

Oh I just adored this story

This was amazing, sweet, wonderful, sexy, and adventurous. When she got pregnant, I was so worried for her but was excited when Anka made the discovery. I thought "grandma" was great too. I wish Powell would have come back...maybe with spaceship full of seeds, plants, livestock, and soil since he was fired. I loved this story.

Marishka says

[He lost a "lover" (girlfriend) and his children when they lost his home planet. Not sure how long ago. And it was only brought up a couple times. (hide spoiler)]

Susan Marie says

not up to par with her other work

Jo (Mixed Book Bag) says

This is erotica and Futuristic Romance . The story is enjoyable and the writing good. However, for me there were too many holes in the story that were never filled. There were also some very good story lines that were not followed. This could be the start of a series and maybe that is why some things were not explained and some areas were not followed.

Carolyn F. says

Although this author is known primarily for erotica, and this book is usually categorized as erotica, this was more about a relationship, although at first I wouldn't have thought that with Sybil and Anka doing the nasty in less than 24 hours. But then the book became more than about hanky panky. Very good book. I think this is a sole book and not in a series.

Loata93 says

Hmmmmm just 2 stars from me. Didn't really feel like the story had much going for it. And I found the characters slightly boring.

Toni (U.A.C.) says

Earth has inhabited the Moon and terraforming Mars, when they discover an alien race, Sumptrians, has moved into the "neighborhood" and are terraforming Venus. Sybil is sent with a small team to find out what they can. A relationship quickly develops between Sybil and the Sumptrian Commander Anka l'Kartay. I liked this story and I liked the Matriarch that ends up adopting Sybil, too cute.

D. E. says

The voice in this book is so incredibly passive, I can't believe it. It's very nearly unreadable. I tend to indulge in Kaitlyn O Conner books now and then, and while they aren't literary classics, the author/s generally manage to spin a fun story. The author has overindulged in her love of internal dialogue to the point of ruining the story. I'll keep slogging on...hopefully it will get better.

Leslie Reno says

I loved this book!!! It could be a series!
