Jasmine says

It seems so ridiculous but it's just too realistic, and that's why it's hilarious to me. I come from a Pakistani family and luckily I haven't had to deal with my dad trying to marry me off ?

George/Zaheer is an asshole but he literally embodies 80% of Pakistani fathers, even in this day and age. Absolutely loved this!

Lucy Baldock says

This play was short. I get what Ayub-Khan-Din was trying to achieve but I hated George. I'm sure that was the idea, but I didn't really like the story there were some very controversial topics. I just don't like to read this sort of story but I had to for my uni course and I managed to finish it which is good but I did cringe a lot whilst reading this.

Daisy Leather says

not sure what to think of this.

Morgan says

3.5/5

Emma Filtness says

A rather straightforward domestic play, funnier than anticipated.

Jaselle says

George is a dick.

lotsofreading says

Studied this when I was 15, studied it again at 19 and it's still just as funny!

Nazia Ahmed says

Based on Ayub Khan-Din's semi-autobiographical play, which has been produced with great success movie "East Is East". You keep thinking of Om Puri when reading his lines, very funny.
