Leonard says

Unique, inspiring, and humorous collection of brief (one page or less) prose observations or memories.

Jackie says

read it, read it, read it!

Woodge says

Got this slim volume as a gift this past Christmas. It contains some very short pieces and doodles which are sort of like thoughtful little musings and mini-stories. Reminded me a little of Barry Yourgrau but more grounded in reality. It was cute.

Hannah Jane says

Favorites:

"these are little packets of light & you need to plant them early in the year & remember to mark where they were because lots of times they look like weeds in the beginning & it's not until later that you see how beautiful they really are."

"If you hold on to the handle, she said, it's easier to maintain the illusion of control. But it's more fun if you just let the wind carry you."

"she always camouflaged herself as a crowd. I've never been lonely, she said, but sometimes it's hard to think above the noise."

Annamarie Bustion says

Just found this at a farmer's market by chance! All flash stories- half presented in Americana type face, half hand-written and accompanied by childlike sketches. Some are silly and whimsical, while others melt your heart open.

Susan Fetterer says

Charming poetic anecdotes and magical illustrations---this quick read lingers in your head for some time. It has child like qualities and panders to the short attention span we all enjoy at times. There's a universal, appealing aspect to the thoughts reminding the reader that we each have much in common with others.

Karli says

"These are little packets of light & you need to plant them early in the year & remember to mark where they were because lots of times they look like weeds in the beginning & it's not until later that you see how beautiful they really are." And that is why this book is amazing.

And this: "I moved a lot when I was young & I still ache a bit at the thought of all those autumns in new & unfamiliar landscapes."

Read this book in autumn. It will make you feel warm and snug in the crisp apple-scented air.

Shanna says

I stole this from my stepmom in the 7th grade.
Just glancing at it still makes me ridiculously happy.

Randy says

This was the second book of this set I read and really enjoyed them. Mostly True was the best so far but this one had some great one page stories as well. I borrowed these books and glad I found them.

Jacqueline Cocklin says

Love it!

Karyn says

I've been in love with Story People since I was in high school, when I first saw some of Andreas' sculptures and drawings at an art store in Newport. Andrea gave me this book as a college graduation/moving away to Colorado present. It's among my prized possessions.

Ellen says

"There are times I think I'm doing things on principle, but mostly I just do what feels good. But that's a principle, too."

Kristin says

Read this in order: Mostly True, then Still Mostly True, then this one (Going Somewhere Soon). I think this is the weakest of the three. None of the stories particularly stood out to me in the way that some remarkable ones from Mostly True and Still Mostly True did. Maybe I've just read too much Brian Andreas over the weekend and I've become desensitized to his style, but I think the other books are stronger.

Christopher says

I love this world of not-as-simple-as-things-appear. I probably read it too fast to really let these lovely moments and drawings fully sink in, but even so, time with them helps me focus in on the world around me just a little bit more closely.
