Just could not really get into this book. Just didn't care about the characters. The plot seemed real weak. And I know it has nothing to do with the story really but it takes place in San Diego at a lighthouse and the cover with the river and the prairie schooner have nothing to do with the story.

Amanda Caswell says

I wasn't expecting much, but even then it really didn't live up to my expectations. I was truly hoping for something corny and maybe a little about redemption or healing. There wasn't much of anything there, in either characters or story. I also had a hard time believing that after everything she still maintained her position and her reputation. The book just ok and I was more than willing to post it on paperbackswap.
