NYC Reads 365 says

"Discover some of the best sights in the five boroughs of the Big Apple. Then use your Metrocard to go visit a few. Find more places to visit by reading other books in the series, Buenas noches a nuestro mundo."

Sara Chang says

We love this book! My son picks this up and brings it over for me to read every night.

Elizabeth K. says

We love this! We also live in New York City, which could certainly explain a lot of the appeal. When we read it, I like to point out which places Lucy has already visited (I was surprised by how many, she's not a year old yet), and which will be future destinations.

Calista says

I was with my brother when he got this for my niece in NYC. We are hoping to inspire them to be curious about the world and want to travel to new places.

The little story is a day doing things in New York. The empire state building, central park, museums and more fun stuff are stuffed into this little book. Great little remembrance.

Lindsay says

We LOVE this series! We read one to Clarissa every night!!

Tami says

Hope likes it because it is where we live and it has the Statue of Liberty in it and she wants to go into the Statue of Liberty and there is the firefighter, police, and Bronx zoo and construction worker and the bridge. ?????????? per hope. Good book that doesn't get her too excited

Annalise says

I personally think Good Night Maryland was better (maybe because we live in Maryland so it more relates to my daughter.) However, I do like how it talks about things like the Art Museum and The Statue of Liberty.

Asho says

This whole series of books is really cute. Grandmommy bought this one as a souvenir for us to add to our collection (which currently includes Good Night Washington, D.C. and Good Night Texas). It features many of the prominent New York landmarks and simple prose text. I'm hoping to add a few more of these books to our collection and instill an early interest in travel in our child.

McKenzie McIlrath says

For this being a short board book for young toddlers I thought it was very well done. It talks about saying goodnight to all of the sites in New York City and is a super fun and easy read that keeps kids engaged with great illustrations.

Sultan * Baby Mama Smut-a-teer* says

Cute book

Elly says

This is one of my favorite bedtime stories, especially for city babies.

Danelle Spicer says

Great book for children to read when learning about New York City! Goes in-depth of the unique things that New York City has to offer.

Destiny Dawn Long says

The first thing that I noticed about these books is their incredibly clunky and awkward prose. The second thing that I noticed is that rather than being a bedtime book, like I expected from the title, they start out in the morning and go through the whole day... often feeling random and haphazard. The illustrations are mediocre.

In short, while I think that this series of books make for popular baby shower and first birthday gifts from family and friends hailing from the featured locales, they're poorly written and not worth the money.

The few that I have are in my donation pile already.

Monica DiNatale says

These books are so fun. I got this for my nephew and he loved it. I like to buy it for kids that don't live in NYC because whenever they visit I can show them some of the things in the book. They use all the great New York City landmarks plus firemen and NYC policemen. I've seen the Philadelphia edition as well and thought it was good too.
