Angela Emma Calin

A very short story. A mystery tale of a late night taxi ride where the final passenger may not be all that she seems.

Part of Emma Calin's 'Love in a Hopeless Place Collection' - a series of stand-alone titles. Available as an individual e-book or as a part of the 'boxed-set'. These titles are linked by a common theme exploring relationships, love and survival within a contemporary working class background.

Lizzie says

Short, to the point, no random useless details. It was mysterious and compelling, the kind of story that makes you want more. This gave me more questions than answers, and made me look for more by Miss Calin. Did Joe come for the passenger, or did she go there for him? All in all, well done

Linn Halton says

Short and sharp! Fab little read...

How easy is it to make the right decision? It depends on whether the decisions are big ones, or little ones... This story is very 'tales of the unexpected', which was a programme I used to love on UK TV and ran from 1979 until 1988. You knew that each tale was going to be very down to earth, if not gritty, and there was always an interesting twist. Author Calin simply excels at short, sharp stories and this shortie completes the "LOVE IN A HOPELESS PLACE URBAN SHORT STORY COLLECTION". I love having a series of 'bite-size' reads on my Kindle. Sometimes you don't want to get into anything lengthy, but still want something that has an impact. Angela does!
