Margaret Klein says

This is a brand new haggadah compiled by the rabbi who ran Big Tent Judaism. It is an inclusive text sensitive to Jews by Choice, multi-racial, multi-ethnic, women, children, people who are not even Jewish. The illustrations help with that message. It includes brief margin notes that range from a Shaker hymn, to a Muslim prayer before eating. It includes all the steps of a seder and makes it accessible to all. The essential Hebrew is there with transliteration. And it includes some of the newer traditions. The orange, the beet, the artichoke, Miriam's Cup. There is even some music (words, not the sheet music) and some recipes. Everything a family preparing its first or its 100th seder would need to prepare without being overwhelming. I would consider using it for a congregational seder or a model seder in a Hebrew School setting.
