Sometimes we have to indulge our inner child! I work in a school, and support kids during a read to self time, so I thought I'd be an example and read one of their classroom books. It was so fun - I never got the chance to read Magic Tree House as a kid

Jack and Annie were setting off to the tree house. They now begin their 34th adventure. They went to the desert and they found someone named Mamoon. Mamoon helped them to on their mission. Later on they found bandits. They ended up in a sandstorm that was blowing everything around everywhere. Mamoon was my favorite character in this, as he was really wise.

The book was about to kids, Jack and Annie that were brother and sister, they went on a mission to help the caliph, king, from Baghdad, in the past. I think that the book is one of the best books I've read so far. It is full of surprises and adventure. I recommend this book to people who would like to read it because they will enjoy it.

One word. Informative. It is really informative! That's why I love this! I learned about the "Place of Wisdom" in Iran (I believe) which is a place full of books and is like a huge library! That's not all! All of the famous people are there! Like, Al-Khwarizmi, the father of my favorite, algebra! I would love to have the opportunity to talk to such a genius like him! I remember one time when one of my classmates asked to my math teacher (she obviously hate Math), "Teacher, why do we have to study about Algebra? Do we have to use it while buying candy in a store? And who even invented this!" I immediately replied, "Algebra was invented by Al-Khwarizmi and it is important in our lives. We won't be studying it if it wasn't! You just don't know how important Algebra in our lives!" So yeah, I'm a Math-lover, specifically Algebra.

I read this book with my students and they enjoyed it. However, they didn't understand this one very well. Most of the Magic Tree House books are easy to follow but this one was difficult.

Season of Sandstorms

Mary Pope Osborne wrote the book, Magic Tree House #34: Season of the Sandstorms. It is the story of two kids named Jack and Annie who find a magic tree house. The book is about Jack and Annie completing a Merlin mission back in time in the desert near Bagdad. The mission is to take a book to the caliph.

Meanwhile, bandits and sandstorms cause them trouble!

The story begins with Jack and Annie doing their math homework. Then, they stop that and go to the magic tree house. The tree house takes them back in time to a desert near Baghdad where they meet Mamoon and his men. As the story continues, Jack and Annie travel to Baghdad with Mamoon. Next, some bandits attack and steal stuff! Later, a sandstorm comes and they almost lose the book! Will they get the book to the caliph and complete their mission? Read the book to find out!

The message of this book is to never give up. The theme is to never give up because Jack and Annie didn't give up on their mission when there were bandits. They didn't give up when there was a sandstorm.

I like Magic Tree House #34: Season of Sandstorms because it was exciting. I learned to never give up. I am like Jack because I am adventurous too. I think you should read this book because it is very thrilling!

Jack and Annie went to the time of the Golden Age in Baghdad. They landed in a palm tree near a spring. They needed a magic rhyme right at the beginning of their mission. They used one to bring help. A magic sandstorm came and brought help from people who were going to Baghdad. They were surprised and excited when they saw the helpers that got into the sandstorm but then just got blown near the spring.

They finally knew the name of one of the helpers which was Mamoon. They also rode on two camels with Mamoon. Bandits came at a later time and only stole a little bit of cinnamon and other spices. After the bandits were gone a sandstorm came and Mamoon, Jack, and Annie got separated. Soon when they got to Baghdad they finally noticed that Mamoon was the Caliph. A Caliph is a leader of Baghdad.

They also went to a place called the House of Wisdom which was a library. They finally used the last magic rhyme they could, which was able to make a magic carpet. They got to the Magic Tree House before the moon rose.

I liked this book because Jack and Annie had a fun time riding the magic carpet.

Another in this great series my daughter and I are reading together.

This is my first Magic Tree House book, and holy cow these are awesome. I'm a social studies teacher, and I love that people are creating this historical fiction. This book is about non-Western history too! The author just got a bunch of major credibility with me.

I like that the book educates along with entertaining. For example, the author mentioned dates and described them because most American kids have no idea what that is. Another example would be the explanation of how and what camels eat in the desert. It's not just a boring encyclopedia though. The author weaves in action as well.

I do wish there was some more craziness with the magic elements. They just seemed to randomly go through time. The author totally could've made it more exciting. They're freaking go through time!

Before teaching this book though, you'll have to do some geography lessons and do a crash course on Islam. The book does a good job of not making it too complicated for children, but it's too simple for middle school readers. This is a perfect fit for a social studies classroom.

I read this as an e-book from Chicago Public Library's system. Because this was mostly text, the e-book did not take anything away from the original.

Mary Pope Osborne described these Merlin Missions as Jack and Annie having "fantasy adventures in real places in real times." This combination of fantastical elements and beautiful real world settings is amazing. I am left wanting to immerse myself in the culture that Osborne describes so easily. I have always wished I could take my children to see the world, but reading these books together makes me feel like they aren't missing out on quite as much.

This is my first book to read in the series of magic tree house, and I pick it to read about baghdad city during golden age when I find this series is so fun so I think that won't be the last book of it!

Jessica Kingwill says

I READ THIS BOOK FOR 4TH QUARTER!!!

I liked this book. Even though it was not as challenging as the other book I have read, it still was well written.

In this book, Jack and Annie have a magic tree house that come randomly whenever the two wizards that send Jack and Annie on missions. Today Jack and Annie are sent on a mission to Baghdad. They must help the caliph spread wisdom to the world. When the magic tree house takes them to Baghdad, they are alone in the desert and must get to the city of Baghdad. They use a book of magical poems to find a helper in the desert named Mamoon. Mamoon is very friendly and lets Annie and Jack use camels to ride to Baghdad. Mamoon gives Jack and Annie a box with a special treasure in it. They have to keep the treasure very safe. When Jack looks to see what the treasure is, he discovers that it is a book. When Jack and Annie get to Baghdad, they have to follow steps to complete their mission by the two wizards named Teddy and Kathleen. When Jack and Annie complete the first few steps, they are in the house where the caliph is. They get there and discover that Mamoon is the caliph. Which means someone in the government. Mamoon asks for the book back and Jack and Annie discover why the book is so important. The book is the writings of Aristotle. Aristotle was a great lover of wisdom. When Mamoon rewards Jack and Annie for keeping the book safe, Jack and Annie get to see a huge library filled with very important books from the building the caliph/Mamoon is in. Jack and Annie leave and return home safely.

I can connect this book to any time traveling idea. When Jack and Annie go into the tree house for a mission and travel to their destination, they sometimes go back in time. In this book in the series, they go back in time to the golden age of Baghdad.

It may technically be #34. But, "Season of the Sandstorms", recommended to me by my eight-year old friend Abby (who also got me hooked on the Wardstone Chronicles, see review for "Revenge of the Witch"), is the first I've read of Mary Pope Osborne's immensely popular Magic Tree House series. With a vast Arabian desert, treasured, priceless writings, an ancient House of Wisdom, a flying carpet, and---of course---a magic treehouse reminiscent in a sense of Bill and Ted's phone booth, it was quite an adventurous and even educational introduction. A very, very, quick read, I wish that Osborne could have slowed down a bit, given Jack and Annie some time to really explore the sights and sounds of Baghdad, perhaps search for clues for their "mission". Still, this book was great fun and I'd love to read another! Maybe #35?

Kat Wells says

I was not happy with this one at all. It seemed to drag so much that I never wanted to read it. I only got through it because the next one looks really good. I love this series and always recommend this for kids but maybe skip this one.

This book was good. My son loved it & loved all of the scenes from magical sandstorms to magic carpet rides, this book kept his attention the whole way through. It was impressive to me how much the author incorporated actual traditions from this country. I actually learned some new things.
