I am surprised that this book is such a page turner. My intention was to read it for a particular class, but I find myself browsing, just picking it up and reading where it opens - like a meditation or oracle. It is well written and I recommend it heartily.

The plot of this book is very clear: you will suffer from something and possibly die unless you can identify it and get yourself help.

There are subplots, such as a loved one develops a terrifying cough, or an odd purplish stain on her skin, or a child will have headaches that should not be braved at such a young age.

There is always pain that should be explained. Or pain that is inexplicable. In any case, this is a fascinating book that will keep you up nights.
