I won this book in a giveaway

I'll be honest. I didn't like it. Not one bit. Not even the tiniest bit. Not the plot, not the characters, not the cardboard "villains", not the writing. I don't give it a lower rating because one star ratings are only for books that I completely loathe and this book, while terrible and extremely boring and frustrating and cringe worthy and, ahem! It's not on my hate list.

And that's all I'll say, before I starting ranting.

So, maybe you'll find something great in this book, but I didn't.

Kara and Jeffrey's love Journey. The love between these two Blossomed and it was a surprise to both of them. Each brought heavy baggage to the relationship. Both of them had paternity issues as it turned out he didn't know his mother or father. And she grew up with a dad who was not her biological father. And finding this out when you're 32 years old can throw you for a loop. Add in an inheritance of millions of dollars and and a new found family let's just say Kara had a lot on her plate. So falling in love was not on her radar at all. Jeffrey loved and loss and was now a bit apprehensive about telling anybody His feelings. Overall it was a good book I enjoyed it. Definitely a HEA book. I highly recommend this book to you. :-)

This is the 2nd Book of the Cavanaugh Island Trilogy and i enjoyed it as much as the 1st one. Anything to do with history of the AA and especially the Sea Islands I enjoy.

The first thing that attracted me to this book was the cover! How adorable that tea cup Yorkie is. Looks just like my little fellow. I knew right away I was going to enjoy this book. I was right!!!!

I fell in love with the book and could not stop reading it. I think I will go take a trip there this summer. LOL That's How warm and welcoming the story made me feel at times .

The characters were wonderful with all their quirky ways! Like in any small place there were tons of gossipers living there, and made it very hard for two people trying to make a go of it, with all the talk and twisted opinions.. Plus, the secrets of the past always got in their way.

It made for such an interesting great read and a wonderful steamy romance endures.

Would make a good tv series as well.

I am thankful that I won this book on Goodreads.com and I will share it with others that's for sure.

I loved this. Kara finds out she has a family she never knew about. Plans to stay for only a week. Meets Jeff and thinks maybe she could stay a little longer. Both have reasons not to want a relationship. Loved the characters and the small-town feel of the island. I'd read others in the series.

This was a pretty good read love found unforeseen circumstances.

I was completely blown away by the time I finished reading this book. It was completely different then I thought it would be. It also proved that one single woman can change the minds of a lot of people just by being who she is.

Kara is a social worker in New York City. She recently learned that she is the daughter of a multimillionaire. She leaves her home in the big city to move to her new home on an island off the coast of South Carolina. She is determined to live there just long enough to restore the house to its former glory. She never thought that she would fall in love and want to stay.

Jeff is an ex-marine who is now the island's sheriff. He takes his job completely seriously. He makes sure that there is very little violence on his island. After promising his cousin to watch over Kara, he never thought he would try to make sure she stays alive. He also did not think that he would fall in love with her and try to keep her on the island with him.

Kara knew when she moved to the island that her 'new' family would try to make her leave. She just didn't think they would threaten her life in the process. For her, having Jeff around to make sure she is safe makes her start to see him more than just the sheriff. She sees him as a man that she really likes and could fall in love with. The more time Kara spends with the people on the island, the more she loves it, and the more she is determined not to leave.

By the end of the book, both Jeff and Kara realized that they loved each other. They also found who was trying to make sure Kara left the island. They then got married. Their marriage, brought most, if not all, of Kara's cousins together. Everyone realized that everything should be put in the past and move forward.

I never thought I would like this book as much as I did. I could not stop reading it. I am extremely happy that I got to read this amazing book about a girl who stood up for what she believed in no matter what was thrown her way.

I recommend this book to those readers who loved reading a book about falling in love and for standing up for what you believe in. You will not be disappointed when you read this book.

This one was better than the first in the series but it's rather boring and predictable. The characters still seemed a bit unrealistic. The plot was alright. I loved the references to Little Rock and the descriptions of the island. Overall the book was decent if you like the HEA type books.

Ruby M. Bullock says

Great reading

I really enjoyed this book. The story line was great, moving at a good pace. Because I was a proofer, I was glad to see only a few grammatical errors.

Tia says

3.5 stars for this read. I loved how protective Jeff was over his Gamma and Kara. The manly marine is getting pretty redundant in all the romance novels. Those Pattons are pretty despicable and greedy. I wanted to know why Father never stepped up. He indeed knew about her life, but kept quiet. Loved the girl power of Kara and M (I can't remember her name). Angel's Landing was good, but isn't as good as the others I've read. Gamma was my favorite character. Food seemed amazing and I love food.

Initial thoughts, not a review.

I received this book free through Goodreads First Reads.

Kara Newell is a social worker in New York on the verge of burnout when she gets a summons from a lawyer to attend the reading of a will of a man she has never met before. Suddenly this paycheck to paycheck gal has inherited a large historical plantation and a humungous bank account from the biological dad she never knew about. Not everyone is pleased with the results of the will reading and her late father's lawyer asks the local sheriff, Jeff Hamilton, to keep an eye out for her.

I have to say I found this story so boring. Her newly found family is so crazy and incensed by the will that her lawyer feels she is in danger and needs protection from the sheriff yet nothing happens to prove that point until page 233. Before that the only other thing to happen is a member of her family, Analeigh, shows up to make friends with her and Kara has a weird feeling about her, doesn't trust her. Kara tells Analeigh she doesn't have time for her right now and Analeigh asks when she can come back. Kara tells her the next day at the same time and Analeigh is thrilled to bits and hugs her. When the local deputy comes by and takes Analeigh home, Kara realizes that she is mentally or emotionally challenged and suddenly that validates her feelings of not trusting her. How sinister of this relative to want to be friends. Yep, don't want to trust those crazy, hugging, overly friendly, mentally challenged types. (This is all said in my most sarcastic tone of voice.) How paranoid and narrow minded can you get? And BTW we never hear from the evil Analeigh again! It was completely anticlimactic and had no bearing on the story at all. I am not even sure why it was put in.

There was another part of the story where Kara throws her money at a virtual stranger in order for this person to open her own business. Even the said stranger is like 'huh, why would you do that? You don't even know me.' Kara's response is that 'as strong black women it is hard to make it in this world.' Seriously? Maybe it's because I am not a strong black woman, but I found this part completely ridiculous. Black, white, or purple, the girl was still a stranger and 99.9% of the World's population would be leery about financially backing a business run by someone you've known for a few hours.

The dialogue was odd to me. Jeff, Kara and most of the side characters were younger than me but they spoke like senior citizens. It was really weird. Had the author not mentioned ages I would have thought I was reading a book about much older adults.

In the end another threat happens and is resolved so quickly, and so easily, I found myself laughing out loud. Then suddenly all is rainbows and roses for Kara and crew. I had high hopes for this book; unfortunately it didn't deliver for me.

Kara Newell gets a call asking her to come to South Carolina for the reading of a will. When David Sullivan, the lawyer, reads the will, she is told that Taylor Patton was her father, and has left her nearly everything he owned, with a few conditions, including restoring Angels Landing and live there for five years. She agrees to stay for a week and then decide what to do with her inheritance.

Jeffrey Hamilton is David's cousin. David asks him to check on Kara because the rest of the Patton family was upset, calling her an imposter, and threatening to contest the will. Jeff is immediately interested in Kara, and they get involved. I liked how she agreed to stay for awhile to think about whether to keep the property or not, instead of just selling. I enjoyed this book.
