Children's Books: EVERYONE HAS A MOTHER (Fun, Adorable, Rhyming Bedtime Story/Picture Book, for Beginner Readers, Honoring Mothers of all Kinds, Including Animals, Ages 2-8) by Sally Huss
Have read other works by the author and have enjoyed them. This is a colorful children's book about being born or hatched and how everyone has a mother.

Other pages show a picture of what's being discussed: birds with their young.
Features 27 different animals and then people and how to thank your mother.
Sample of her other works is included along with a list of her other works.

I like the premise of this book. It also made a good point that there are several kinds of mother's: birth mothers, adoptive mothers, foster mothers, and grandmothers, etc. The story is told with examples from the animal kingdom. The story did keep my 3-year-old great grandson engaged, but the 4-year-old great grandson had little interest.

Another great children's book by Sally Huss! This time, she's talking about mothers. Starting with familiar animals that one might find in a zoo, Huss shares that every animal has a mother. Her illustrations show mother animals playing and loving their offspring. She also talks about how there are many types of human mothers (from birth mothers to great-grandmothers). A delightful book, perfect for reading to young ones.

My Rating: 5+ stars

This sweet little book is perfect for Mother's Day and I love how it puts equal importance on birth mothers, stepmothers, adoptive mothers, and foster mothers! That's so great!

A cute picture book about mothers

Everyone has a Mother is a cute picture book with colorful illustrations that little children and their mothers will appreciate. This book is perfect to read for Mother's Day.

Gayle Cappelluti says

Everyone Has a Mother is an educational and cute story that reminds little ones that everyone has a mother, whether he/she is big or small, has skin, fur, or feathers, even your mother has a mother. Even beyond this, there is so much to learn in this little book. For instance, your little one will learn the proper names for babies, like puppies, kittens, and calves, and where these animals live, like baby squirrels in a field, baby goats in a pen, baby llamas in a corral, and so on. Little readers will even be reminded to thank their mothers for everything they do, like teaching and loving their babies. This is a sweet story. If your little one is anything like my 2-year-old grandson, he/she will really enjoy it.

rhyming text and delightful pictures always make a book by this author a treasure for children and those who love them and to see them find that love and reading that will carry them through life.

As usual this Huss book was a tad long for the age of the listening audience, but had a pretty good reading rhythm this time because she didn't try to rhyme or use big words. The illustrations were nice.

Laura Reading says

Cute and clever with a pleasant cadence to the prose.
The illustrations are wonderful and just right for young listeners and early readers.

I recently used Everyone has a Mother to start a lesson for a group of preschool children to start a discussion about Mother's Day. The book points out a large number of animals and then humans have mothers and how important they are in teaching young children. In return, young children need to show their love for their mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers by saying thank you and I love you to your mother. It is a great book to get children talking about their relationship with their mother and family members. The illustrations are cute and the text has a good rhythm and some rhymes.

Adorable!

Since I am about to become a grandma I am looking for awesome book gifts for my daughter. This is one of them.

The concept thought is easy - everybody has a mother! Thought the former biology student in me is irritated to see snakes, lizards, and ladybugs listed in this book, though these species don't do any parenting, I guess babies won't care.

Sally Huss' illustrations make up for any flaws of this kind.

My favorite illustrations are the turtles, the llamas, hens and chicks (note that very cleverly the author lists also animals with different names for adults and youngsters), the hippopotamuses, the rhinos and the giraffes. I also appreciated that author Sally Huss acknowledges that there are many different kind of mothers: birth mothers, step mothers, adoptive mothers, foster mothers...

All in all an awesome book. Since I am in love with the artwork I will check out more books by Sally Huss.

ENCHANTING! - 5 STARS.
