Pollyanna and the Greek Billionaire: Innocent and Betrayed, Part 2 Marian Tee

Marriage is nothing like the heartless Greek billionaire Kyrillos Gazis imagines.

But more than that, it is probably his young and innocent wife Pollyanna that is the biggest surprise. She makes him happy beyond belief, and when she gifts him with the most beautiful twins, Kyrillos knows that his life will never be the same again. It will always be better each day, and all because of his family.

Now, the only thing he must make sure is for Pollyanna to never find out that he's lied about loving her.

This is Book 2 of Kyr and Pollyanna's epic love story.

I knew there was going to be an angsty cliffhanger and now it will seem like forever until Polly gets her well deserved HEA. Kyr needs to do some major grovelling in book 3. I'm looking forward to seeing what lengths he will go to in order to win Polly back.

Laura says

Since I normally only rate one book at a time reviewing a whole series at once has proven interesting and entertaining.

Pollyanna is visiting her Godparents who live on a Greek Island owned by Kyrillos. Her Godparents daughter, Ana, who ran away from the island several years before leaving both her parents and Kyrillos devastatingly heart broken. Polly, who is nothing like Ana, slowly chips away at the armor that has encased Kyrillos heart since Ana left. When finally realizes that he does love Polly his previous love shows up wanting him to leave his wife and children for her.

The series is divided into three books with book one being the courtship which was actually a pretty good read. Pollyanna is young and naïve to the fact that Kyrillos is only spending time with her to get her into bed or so he keeps telling himself. I will give him credit for trying to stay away from her knowing he would only hurt her if Ana came back. But when he finds out that Ana is marrying another man he turns to Polly who has stars in her eyes every time she looks at him. I really enjoyed this part even if it was pretty anticlimactic.

Book two takes place seven years later and covers Kyrillos and Polly's marriage and the struggle of her wanting a career and his fear of her leaving him. Kyrillos has withheld his heart from his wife all that time and she is realizing there is something not right in her marriage but can't put her finger on it until the night of their anniversary part when her world shatters. I am surprised that she never asked him outright why he never said he loved her. I this section to the story was just ok and I am really surprised that I even finished this one.

In book three Ana is back and Kyrillos has realized that yes he truly does love his wife but she won't believe him and why should she after all their marriage was just a big fat lie and he is a monkey farting shit stick for never being honest in the first place. I was really disappointed when I got to this point because you would think that Ana would create more trouble and try to insinuate herself into his life now that she is actually present, it certainly would have made the story more interesting. Although I will admit to a certain moment of 'hahaha sucker, that's what you get for being a douche' when Polly started hanging out with another man. Taking that to a more intense moment before Kyrillos reasserted his claim on her might have been interesting as well.

Overall not even close to being the most exciting thing I have ever read and the only panty droppingly good moment in the whole series may well have been at the very end of book three but getting there through the story felt long and grueling much of the time.

Like I mentioned from my previous review of book 1 I was preparing myself for the heartache that Pollyanna would experience and it never happened.

I like the story flow in which years passed by and the direction of the relationship between Kyrillos and Pollyana plus their kids.

I can't believe that even it's been 8 years since they married, Kyr never changed till he realized what he truly felt for Pollyanna. Not only that, but he never gave Pollyana the chance to chase her dreams.

I felt for Pollyanna because their relationship wasn't on equal footing. It was always Pollyanna giving and Kyrillos taking. And reading her point of view when she witnessed the betrayal of Kyr was just too heartbreaking, I cried for her especially the scenery with her children.

I wonder how Kyr will make it up to her. I reread the scene from Willow and Stavros' story where Kyr was mentioned. I was wondering about the time frame of that part and it seems that they were still separated by that time.

I just have to mention that I love their children. To me, they are the light of this book and I just couldn't get over the issue of Kyr even when it took years for Pollyanna to realize the secret that he kept.

Just a few more days till the next book.

I received an arc from the author in exchange for an honest review.

Isha Coleman says

Kyr and Pollyanna are beginning a new journey. It's not the one either expected but it may end up being just what they need. Kyr wants to be the center of Pollyanna's world. Pollyanna wants someone to love and to be loved in return. There were so many secrets going into this relationship that it's hard to see this ending well. I really wish Marian Tee had combined these stories. The split format ruins the flow of the story.

Pollyanna and the Greek Billionaire

I really enjoyed this book. The characters were interesting and the story line was good. The only thing wrong is it is continued.

Melissa Sagastume says

My opinion on Kyrillos Gazis remains the same. I'm all for a controlling alpha but I just don't see how he loves her. I will say the second book is ten times better than the first one and the cliff hanger leaves you wanting more. My heart goes out to Pollyanna, I wish she'd stand her ground more. What happens next is the perfect wake up call for Kyrillos Gazis. I'd still recommend the series!

Irene Sim says

I knew it was in vain to hope that things might be different in the second book, but I just couldn't help myself and not read it.

Kyr continue being a MEGA-ASS@ practicing a method known to man-kind since the dawn of humanity: How to keep your woman close to you without her own life? Just keep her breeding your spawns. So everytime Polly express a desire to start a career or even study, Kyr just gets her pregnant.

Polly on the other hand, just blooms under his devotion and attention (mistakinly thinking it's his own version of love). She transforms from barely an adult, to a woman sure of her status in marital bliss. The love for her husband and children, combined with the island's seclusion, protects and reinforce her illusions. But all is not well in paradise and the moment comes that the curtain finally falls and Polly is forced to confront her marriage's reality.

Annmarie says

The hero obviously loves her but doesn't get it yet, after all these years? Seriously? And the end when he breaks her by kissing his ex, ugh. So stupid. He knows that he doesn't love Ana still but because of pride let's her kiss him. I guess it could be worse, he could be like one of the other heros in Marian's book and go screwing other women until they realize they are wrong. So this was a mild one in that respect, but no less heartbreaking for Pollyanna when she sees it and finds out the whole truth of their history. I felt bad for her for so long because his stupid pride blinded him to the truth. But, now he knows and will fight for her...finally.

Nidhi Bhatt says

Wth! Kyr is a complete shit of a man... the one who deserves to be abandoned!

Pollyanna is everything he doesn't deserve! Poor girl ruined her education for him, stays home with kids, does everything which pleases him for his sake, doesn't want to work against his wishes, keeps having his kids...four of them! No kidding! still the loser is bloody insecure!

Grow up man! See beyond your precious Ana! Pollyanna is priceless in his life...

When he knows that Ana is divorced, he nearly ruins his marriage and lives of his kids! Loser! Wimp! and all the bad words I cannot write here but can think!

The end is well deserved!

Ugh, totally cried. T_T And Kyr wins the Biggest Jerk Award. Expanding on the eight years of marriage between Kyrillos and Pollyanna, the couple learn what it's like to be married. Children, the struggles with staying at home vs working, dealing with hubby's constant need to chain you to his side, and figuring out if you really made a mistake in saying 'I do'. I enjoyed the drama, not so much the heartbreak. Too many feels with this one, mostly because of one's indecision and the other's need to make their partner happy. Perhaps a little too much emotion for such a fast pace story, though the pace was very nice with the highlighted moments.

As with all her work, Tee's style of writing pulled me in and made it harder to take the emotional blows that came. I loved the set up and I ADORE the precious children that they had, especially the twins. Despite being so young, I loved what their contributed to the story. It's definitely different from her other books because of the children and the thought of a perfect marriage working on their already waning trust, but what came out of it was something I probably didn't want to know until it happened. It ends on a cliff hanger with the final part coming out five days later so it's not that much of a horror to wait. I loved Pollyanna and seeing the slight changes in her maturity but I look forward to seeing her finding her own voice.

emotional cheating and cheating

Had he done the right thing, marrying her?

“I’d rather you postpone going to school until you give birth, but I’ll leave the decision to you.”

“I love you, Kyr.”

Even now, he couldn’t say it, but that was okay.

She could not risk doing anything that might make her lose him.

With that thought in mind, she told Kyr lightly, “Then you’re lucky I’m not a career woman.”

He visibly relaxed at her words, and she knew she had said the right words...even if they didn’t feel completely right.

When Pollyanna gave birth to the twins, both of them were awed. Neither of them had been the type to dream of having kids, Pollyanna because she had still been young and Kyr because he had used to associate the idea of marriage with Ana.

“Love you so much.”

Her too-macho husband still didn’t answer, but it was okay.

Actions spoke louder than words, and she was content.

Nona’s daughter is getting divorced.

The more rumors he heard about Ana’s controversial divorce spread, the more he wanted to talk to Ana, and the more he began to hate the shackles of marriage.

Ana.

She looked almost exactly like the day he had last seen her. Tall, golden-skinned, slender, and exotic, she was still vibrantly beautiful even though, like him, she was in her mid-thirties. But her clothes had changed, and so had her bearing. In the past, Ana had been like the ice maiden, and even then he had known it was her way of coping, her way of preventing herself to be hurt by how others had looked down on her because of her poverty.

Now, the reserve was completely gone, and in front of him was a quietly confident woman dressed expensively in Chanel from head to toe.

This close, everything in the past came hurtling back, and he stiffened as all the feelings came back.

Hatred, despair, and love---

He squeezed his eyes shut.

But he couldn’t get her out of his mind.

Ana, his Ana, the first girl, the only girl he had ever loved, and she was back.

Ana.

All his dreams from boyhood---

Could they be his again?

Could he make them come true?

Ana was begging him to take her back, just like he had always dreamed of.

It was his chance to destroy her the way she had destroyed him.

But the words were locked in his throat.

Ana.

The girl he had loved for over a decade, since he was fifteen, or maybe he had loved her even before that, since they had grown up together.

Ana.

Ana.
Her lips touched him.
At the same time, Kyr heard his wife's voice behind him.

The sight of her husband breaking away jerkily from another woman---
The knowledge that her husband had kissed that other woman---
Pain was when the penny finally dropped, and she realized dazedly that she had just caught her husband in an act of infidelity.
No matter how long he lived, Kyr knew he would never forget that moment.
The way his wife had paled at seeing him with Ana---
The way his wife had started to sway, as if the mere sight of him with another woman was like being stabbed---

Angel says

A lot of time goes by in this book, 8 years, in fact. It starts with the marriage of Kyrillos and Pollyanna, then continues to hit some important points of their marriage. I won't give anything away (no spoilers!), but there's definitely some emotional tumult. As with any Marian Tee story, there were tears. I love that her books are so well written that when a character is hurt, I cry. I love the emotional catharsis that comes with reading her books. And this one is another great love story by the talented Marian Tee!

Letitia Moore says

I'm not going into detail about the characters. If your reading this book, you probably read part one.....if not, READ IT :)

In my review for part one, I told you Ms. Sadistic would be wanting her pleasure in books two and three, well, I was right !!!! I blubbered like a baby.

Poor Pollyanna. You can feel her heartbreak when she catches Kyr in the arms of another women. And like the typical male, Kyr thinks he can have his cake and eat it too. He realizes he doesn't want his ex, but not until he almost loses his family. I can't wait to read part three.....make him grovel, Ms. Tee ;)

Part 2 started with Kyr and Polly being married and to actually expect an HEA (hey, doesn't that what happen after you get hitched? You get your HEA?) was understatement. What with Kyr still the hangup little shit who can't fucking let go of his past that's why every time Polly said I love you, he would just shut the fuck up like a deaf fucktard? Yes, absolutely. Even with having the twins first, then Leo then Annalisa, he. Still. Couldn't. Say. It. Back. I'm not really sure if that's how it is for married couples—you get married (even if the love was one-sided), you fuck to have kids, and then you fuck up after having them. Because surely, that's pretty much what happened to Kyr and Polly. I agree, Marian still does the hottest of scenes like a champ. And that's how the sex should be even after being married and having children.

I love how the kids bring the other side of both parents. Like when the twins was born, I saw a fatherly Kyr. I just wished Marian gave Kyr a hard time with the kids. Like perhaps, how he would stay up late because the other twin won't call it a night, and then he would talk to him like a shithead (just so I have something to laugh about—hahaha), or how Kyr failed at preparing milk for them and at changing diapers? How Kyr would bribe with a billion dollar check each so the twins would shut up already and let them sleep? Those kind of moments because I honestly think, Marian deprived us of it all. But there were still laughable moments with the parents and the kids. Still, there could have been more to this.

The conception of the third kid (Leo) was pretty much uneventful but it paved way to the conception of the fourth. It's just so heartbreaking that Kyr couldn't see pass the insecurities behind his wife who had only a high school diploma to brag about (was that even brag-worthy?), when she asked him if she could go to New York for work, because almost all of the mothers of the twins' classmates were career women. With that, Kyr was clearly STILL blinded by what his ex did to him. Bitch Ana did a great number on Kyr that he thought Polly was just like Ana! (How dare you, Kyr?!) I understand perfectly well why Polly wanted to do that. It's like everything happened too fast, that even when she had the kids and the billionaire, that's the only thing that defined her. Don't read that chapter, it has a shortcut to everything painful.

So to figure out that motherfucker Kyr still wanted slut Ana back in his life when she suddenly showed her ugly self up on the day of their anniversary even after four beautiful children (Dio, Ella, Leo, Annalisa) and eight fucking years of marriage with Polly is so freaking beyond me! AAAAAAHHHHHH!!!! I swear I'm ready to commit murder with this bastard. SO. FUCKING. DUMB!

And of course, Marian being her sadistic self had to make Ana's appearance the day of their anniversary. Very well, Marian, I could fucking kill you, too.

By the end of the book, I was so ready to scream fire the fuck out of my voice right in Kyr's face! Because him thinking he could only have this married life + children with only Ana and not with Polly? WHAT A GODDAMN IDIOT! God help me.

Which brings me to the conclusion: MARRIAGE DOESN'T SOLVE ANYTHING. It's not the solution/answer to any fucking thing.

I know my heart has been shot to bits for Polly because of what happened. And I don't know, I might not recover from that even when I read the last book.

Once again, not only Marian could whip something this out of this world but she also revealed how she could have her readers by the neck to love this ugly, epic story.
