Look, Look! Peter Linenthal

Look, look! Children run, fish swim, stars shine . . . all for baby's eyes to see. This sturdy board book, full of high-contrast black-and-white cut-paper art perfect for staring at, is just the thing for the eyes of the youngest babies. A few words in curving red type on each spread describe the scenes -- a car races, a cat stretches, flowers bloom-- and extend the book's age appeal so that it will be fascinating to older babies, too. Striking and stylish, Look Look! is the ideal first board book for babies just beginning to look and learn. Peter Linenthal is an illustrator who has taught art in elementary schools for twenty years.

Trina (Between Chapters) says

My baby LOVED the high contrast simple images in this book. He's now 1 and still grabs this one often to flip through.

Kylara Jensen says

Board Book for newborns.

An ABSOLUTE MUST-HAVE! This should be every newborn's first book.

We got this when Everett was about 6 weeks and she was just starting to follow images with her eyes.

The black and white contrasting pages make this super fun for young babies to look at. The black, white and red is supposed to stimulate their brains.

Everett's favorite image is the cat!!

Margie says

What's black and white and red all over? This very basic book for the very young. To read aloud or just to gaze at the pictures.

Walter_Reads says

Whoa. I was NOT ready for this. A linguistic and visual bonanza that left me reeling. I could feel my mind expanding with every page. Dad swore my soft spot was pulsing by the end.

I may have cried a little, but I NEED more.

Five stars, Mr. Linenthal. Five stars.

Orion Kopf says

Perfect for babies with nice high contrast pictures and simple words

Karen says

One of the few books the one year old in my life will sit through. I started doing actions for the pages to keep myself entertained while reading this one, and that just makes her love it all the more.

Debbie says

Great for the first few weeks when she can't see color

Denise says

This book is straight up baby crack, my 4 month old baby grabby-hands for it if she can see from the rocking chair. The fish page is particularly something, her eyes get very wiiiide at that page. I can't say much about the plot but it's certainly got what babies crave.

Amy says

This was Matty's first book; he really liked the fish page. We passed along the book to Gretchen at her baby shower for her daughter Nora.

Talieh Rohani says

A great book for your little ones. My son enjoyed this book since he was 1 months old.

Julia Smith says

This was one of two high-contrast b&w books we got when Crush was first born, and she still likes to look at it with me more than a year later. Effective, simple, quiet, sweet.

Mckinley says

black and white

DJ says

Newborns are born without the ability to see clearly or color. Prior my son being born I read up on the need to have high contrast books for the first few months. So naturally, when he started to be awake more (vs. sleeping all the time due to being in NICU), this was the first books I read to him when I brought him home. You can see how his eyes are tracking the contrast. I also recommend looking at high contrast videos, and he liked that a lot as well.

As he grew a little older and grasping for things more, this book and "Hello, Animals!" are the books that I hand over to him and he can flip through himself. He learned how to turn the page with these books as it's nice and thick. I thought that was kind of cool to interact with my son by telling about what he's seeing. The words are SUPER short, but if you explain what he's looking at such as, "The sun has eyes points the eyes, but they don't really have eyes", etc, it stretches out the story time. He learned how to turn the page at around 3 months.

Eleanor says

The sun makes me laugh and I like the pictures. It's a bit boring for mummy

Beyondthebookends says

The simple text mixed with Black and White high contrast photos also makes this a great book to read off the bat. My boys use to point and stare at each image as I repeated over and over again what they were seeing.
