When I picked this up, the earth shook. while everyone was running around in the Davao mall, I knew there was something inside it that would change my life. It sure did. Kudos, Mr. Bradden.

Jeanne says

Sehr interessant. Ergänzt sich gut mit der Blume des Lebens

Stephanie says

I difficult read but interesting.

Kathy says

Heavy reading...

Carol says

Braden's early work -- but it's timeless!

If Awakening to Zero Point: The Collective Initiation had been about self awakening rather than world awakening, I would have given this book four stars instead of two. The information included about the mystery school initiations is top notch and presented in a way that I have not read before. I also loved his explanation of sacred geometry and the Flower of Life. Here are some other bits that I resonated with:

"All answers relevant to your truth are within you; within the living intelligence that breathes as each cell of your body, pulsating life force throughout every aspect of your being. You are no longer searching for truth beyond yourself." pg 12

"It is true that each temple site had a primary deity personifying the focus of that particular temple. Depicted as monumental statues and in deep relief, both inside and outside of the walls, in most instances these figures were not intended to represent external "gods." Rather, each temple was dedicated to the isolation and focus of one component of the human psyche; one unique aspect of personality that must be balanced prior to moving into higher levels of mastery." pg 71

"Allowing yourself, and others, to experience the consequences of choice, without judgement, is one of the last, and highest levels, of life mastery." pg 74

"Various derivations of the Flower of Life have become recognized throughout the world as the "Tree of Life" and the "Seed of Life." pg 135

But, Gregg Braden isn't talking about self enlightenment as much as he is about a world awakening. He claims that the earth is resonating faster than it ever has before and that this increase in resonance will quasi-force people into changing. Therein lies my problem with this text. All change comes from within by choice. Change is not, in my opinion, caused by any outside forces, vibrations, planets, earth spinning, whatever. We may think that the cause is external, but it never is.

I don't believe that everybody on earth will ever think the same way or believe the same way. It is through our diversity that we are strong and develop new ways of being and existing. It is important to me that everyone finds the way that works for them, to listen to that internal voice that speaks so clearly when the mind is silent. Braden talks about many instances in his life where he's heard this voice himself. His world view has changed and that is why he talks about an entire world change. That's valid for him.

There's a lot in here that I didn't connect with: crop circles, the shroud of Turin, platonic solids, vibrations caused by mudras, magnetic field theory. Others might though, so I'm mentioning them here in case you're interested in researching any of those things. Braden is an expert on all of those topics.

I enjoyed Braden's later creations: The Divine Matrix: Bridging Time, Space, Miracles, and Belief or his collection of meditations, The Divine Name much more than Awakening to the Zero Point. If you're interested in this author, you may want to explore those titles.
