Five in Circle is the last installment in a 5-book YA fantasy action adventure series full of hidden plot twists and turns. The last arc of the circle, the final battle. The Prophecy of the One is fulfilled. Will any survive?

Rescuing the rest of the humans, Haylwen and her brother Cadarn are forced out of the Castle—and all the power it contains. Scaled masters of intrigue and powerful magic, dragons now have nothing to stop them. The destruction all of humanity rushes toward Haylwen. Her greatest weapons are determination and a handful of friends. Bereft of the home she so long searched for, Haylwen must show leadership greater than she's ever known.

Her brother Cadarn, overwhelmed and lost, fights to make his way through both a figurative and very real jungle. Guardians, the Hidden and magic users, battling amongst themselves and between each other, make for a ridiculously difficult army to train. Why does it seem the harder he tries, the worse it gets? Struggling to do enough, work hard enough, make a path when he doesn't know where he is or where he's going, dodging flaming attacks from above, Cadarn tries to support Haylwen in her insane mission.

They fight, even though they're scared. Bravely, Haylwen and Cadarn rally those around them, facing death and countless enemies. A million to one odds against them, they lead a tiny group to attack the ancient might of the dragons.

Haylwen and Cadarn face their final and toughest challenge yet. The ultimate test. Everything rides on their ability to succeed against impossible odds. Will they be able to resist the dragons' incredible, fire-laced onslaught? Or will they fail and take humanity into a new age of misery and slavery under tooth, claw, and wing?

Fantasy. Fairytale. Dragons. Magic. What more can you ask for in a YA fantasy and magic adventure series?
