GhosTV Jordan Castillo Price

For the past dozen years, Victor Bayne has solved numerous murders by interrogating witnesses only he can see—dead witnesses. But when his best friend Lisa goes missing from the sunny California campus of PsyTrain, the last thing he wants to find there is her spirit.

Disappearing without a trace in a school full of psychics? That's some trick. But somehow both Lisa and her roommate have vanished into thin air. A group of fanatics called Five Faith has been sniffing around, and Lisa's email is compromised.

Time is running out, and with no ghosts to cross-examine, Vic can't afford to turn down any offers of help. An old enemy can provide an innovative way to track Vic's missing friend, and he enters into an uneasy alliance—even though its ultimate cost will ensnare him in a debt he may never manage to settle.

EDIT: I re-read this book this weekend to ready my body for PsyCop 7! I devoured this book in one really hungover afternoon.

I will try to keep this review short and sweet. Oh and spoilers probably because I go on tangents.

Guys, Vic is so badass. I love that pill-popping son of a gun. He makes me laugh more often than not, and usually does things that typical MC's don't, even when I want them to. Vic is your man for unconventional MC/hero behavior. You know who else I like? Jacob. Because he's a total fangirl, just like me.

I don't particularly care for Lisa. I don't know.. she just hasn't grown on me. I liked her in the first book, but after that I kinda don't care. Everyone's all "Omg where's Lisa?" and I'm like "Leave the bitch." but I guess that wouldn't make a good book, huh? Ha!

Know who else is awesome? Dreyfuss. I love him. He's what... an anti-hero? A helpful villain? Who know! But I like him and his weirdo hippie vibe. I bet he did a lot of LSD in his youth.

This book was awesome. It was different from the others, but it was compelling and weird and I really didn't know who the 'bad guy' was until JCP let the MCs find out, which was awesome for me.

Okay, now I'm read for the next book! rubs hands together anxiously

Older review:

Crash crash crash crash crash crash crash crash crash crash!

By the end of this book I was fangirling hard for Crash.. obviously..

So here's an illustration I did of Crash during my obsession!

Sorry, got distracted. I really love Crash.

I liked this story a lot. It might have been my least favorite of the series.. but still loved it. I thought it was weird that Jacob now has an ability... and some of the stuff in this book was so far out it was hard for me to wrap my mind around it.

Still, awesome book and I'm sad I don't have another one to start reading immediately...

After realizing Lisa is missing, Victor and Jacob have to accept help from an unlikely party for the sake of expediency.

' Everything around us felt wrong, smelled wrong, tasted wrong. Every sensory detail I experienced reminded me I was no longer home, and I'd been ripped out of comfort zone. Jacob, though...Jacob felt right.'

From new abilities to people he knew at Camp Hell to the search for a missing friend to a special delivery of a GhostTV, Victor's hands are full.

I'm not too crazy about that last scene in the book though ((view spoiler)) because it made the ending abrupt.

By far the BEST storyline in the whole series. This was fascinating, fun, layered, and took the series, especially the psych-portion to an entirely new level. For paranormal fans, book 6 would satisfy.

However, as a follow-up to the delicious smut-fest that was book 5, this was ENTIRELY too TAME! I adored and reveled in the growth and now the security of the Vic/Jacob pairing...but I missed the SEX, oh, that hot hot SEX that was in "Camp Hell" prior.

Still, this book solidified Vic & Jacob as one of my FAVORITE M/M couples out there. We got to see more silliness & banter, total trust, vulnerability, dependency, and pure love between them...and THAT was well worth it.

I hate that there's not another book waiting for me to read. I will try and squeeze as much out of the shorts as I can. But, JCP...if happen to stumble upon this review...PLEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEAAAAAAASSSSSEEEEEEEE...I need the next book...I NEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEDDDDDDD more! :)

Edited to add

Couldn't resist! LOVE these guys!!

Back to review from before

Oh PsyCop, how did you get me wrapped so tightly around your little finger?

I loved "GhosTV" so very much. So much that I'm in a brief mourning period because there are no other books left in the series. When is the next one going to come out?! Anyway, this book was much longer than the previous ones, and felt more personal to me. We learned so much about all of the characters. Many things were brought to light; love, hate, insecurities, trust issues... it was a very revealing chapter in the PsyCop series. We also got to see some other aspects of Vic and Jacob's powers, which was both very cool and extremely creepy. I especially enjoyed learning about Constantine. Wow! I can't wait to find out where that angle leads.

This book is just perfectly orchestrated and so well thought out. I liked it better than the one before it, and I'm dying to see what Jordan Castillo Price has in store for her next installment.

Shurrn says

Oh Hell Yes!

I love it when Vic and Jacob get to work together...
Plus, Vic finally gets his hands on a GhosTV...

I'd had proof, time and time again, that the boogie man and the monsters under the bed were real. Maybe what I'd never seen with my own eyes was the evidence that my own mojo was real, too.

Lisa goes missing and our favorite PsyCops are on the case. Before they have a chance to hop a flight to California, the Federal Psychic Monitoring Program (FPMP) pulls strings to detain Vic at the airport.

He's about two seconds away from being on the wrong end of a cavity search when Con Dreyfuss shows up with his unlimited influence and wealth to usher Jacob and Vic to California. Victor hates the idea of owing the FPMP a favor, but he's willing to take all kinds of risks to save Lisa from whatever horrible things are happening at PsyTrain.

PsyTrain triggers all kinds of Camp Hell flashbacks for Vic. Sure, the facility seems perfectly legit once you get past the part where psychs are disappearing without a trace... There's something lurking in that facility that has alarm bells ringing for both PsyCops...

VICTOR

Physically shielding myself was second nature for me by now, like blowing on my coffee to lessen the scald factor or positioning myself upwind of a rotting corpse.

Vic was a total badass in this book - he's been steadily honing his skills over the course of the series and all that hard work is paying off. There are no leads or valuable clues about the missing students, and when a professor disappears into thin air, it seems Vic is the only one with the skills to solve the case.

There are no ghosts lurking in the halls of PsyTrain - which is good, because it means that the missing Psychs are probably alive, but it means he's scraping for clues... Luckily, FPMP gifts him with a secret weapon - the GhosTV he's been lusting after. It's trial by fire as Jacob and Vic learn to manipulate the controls on the machine. The effects are staggering and make for some fantastic reading. We're treated to several new forms of psych talent as Vic subjects himself to the waves emanating from the Tv. Those scenes really stole the show in this book, and I look forward to seeing what else this technology is capable of.

JACOB

"I never really understood how brave you are."

Jacob's little PsyFetish really gets a work out in this book. Victor's badassadry is nothing short of legendary and Jacob gets a front row seat. Since conventional investigative work isn't really cutting it, Jacob serves as backup and an extra set of eyes.

They've faced off against ghosts side by side before, but this time its personal. They don't have any of the resources they would normally be able to pull from in Chicago, so they're forced to lean on that douche-bag Con Dreyfuss's contacts and connections. To his credit, Con seems to be genuinely invested in the case as he tags around behind Jacob and Vic, but who knows with that guy...

Over the course of this book, Vic discovers something no one else knows about the regional director of the FPMP...

This case is more than a little sticky...

There's an Anti-Psych organization working in California,
The GhosTV has Vic's ability off the scales in a dangerous way,
The man who has been tapping their phones is in the room next door,
Vic's old Camp Hell nemesis, Faun Windsong graces us with her obnoxious presence,

Plus, there's some seriously questionable vegan cuisine,
A pack of clueless Psych Students,
A spirit with a bone to pick,
A security guard with a pervy crush on poor Vic, and Jacob drops a bomb nobody saw coming...

This book really took the series to new heights - it's been building in momentum for the last several installments and I'm becoming a little obsessed with Vic - my adorable, uber-psychic, endearingly neurotic, pill-popping, justifiably paranoid badass... I just want to give him a hug, even though he would be super awkward about it and not understand...

Side note: There was a moment in this book where Vic muses about topping Jacob, thinking:

I felt like a greyhound attempting to mount a mastiff whenever we changed things up...

...I swear I laughed so hard I had to put down the book 'cause there were tears in my eyes. There's a great deal of inadequacy racing through Vic's brain, and while it was handled in that signature humor rattling around in Vic's brain, it was still lovely to see that the relationship continues to evolve between these two...

Sooo many questions; very few answers.

That doesn't mean I didn't enjoy the latest installment in this quirky, sexy series. The author has definitely expanded this world from typical "day in the life" adventures of humble detective Victor Bayne, and has elevated it to "what new powers" will be discovered today??

The stakes are definitely higher as Vic and Jacob try to find Lisa. They need help and it's oh-so-convenient that sinister (?) agent Con Dreyfuss is there to lend a hand for a due repayment in kind. They are damned if they do and damned if they don't; how much of themselves are they willing to sacrifice for the resources and answers they so desperately want?

This was probably the funniest, most emotional installment yet as Vic's insecurities almost get the best of him. But he's stubborn and has inner strength and conviction he didn't even know he had. Charmingly dorky and unassuming it's no wonder that Jacob and others are smitten. I loved the new insights to these two and hope for more revelations and bigger proclamations. Like the last few installments, this ends with quite a shocking turn of events, and it remains to be seen how Vic's new powers change his life for the better and hopefully, not for the worse.

Ingela and Sofia, as always I enjoyed laughing and swooning with you!!

Beanbag Love says

What's good about this book is very, very good. There were a couple of things that bothered me enough to take away a star, though.

Vic and Jacob discover that their old buddy, Lisa, seems to be missing from her training center in Santa Barbara, California. A couple of trainees have disappeared without a trace. The clock is ticking and they need to find her.

The mystery is pretty great. Vic, once again, discovers new gifts to go along with his other talents and Jacob and he continue to learn about his strange, undocumented, abilities. I love all that except for one thing. We start the book in a kind of backslide from where we left off after Camp Hell. Vic is once again wandering around in a daze. He had so much development in Camp Hell, was so much more proactive, it was disappointing to see him back in the zombie-fied behavior. At one point I really had to wonder what Jacob sees in him since Vic seems to give so little positive feedback.

But, as with the other books, he wakes up at a certain point and starts to truly become an active part of the story. I think he's ready to start the books in that place, but maybe that's just me.

Once we get to the training center and other elements come into play, Vic steps up and it's really enjoyable to read. The descriptions of his stunning new gift, his realizations about others' insecurities, and his devotion to Jacob are all top notch story telling. I loved it.

My biggest gripe I really mention because it seems to be laying foundation for further stories. Peppered throughout is this narrative that people who fear Psychs are "prejudiced". This idea runs completely counter to the Psy-Cop world building so far. Here's one quote that stuck out to me:

...we now had a better appreciation of how vulnerable Psychs actually were to the superstitious nutjobs who perceived us as serious threats.

Really? Only superstitious nutjobs could perceive people who can enslave their minds from across a room within seconds as "serious threats"? They ARE serious threats! Just because most of the ones we've met are "good guys" doesn't mean they're harmless. If Lisa goes off the rails (and it would be completely organic for any of them to do so considering the psychic stress they deal with daily) she could potentially trigger a world destroying sequence of events. Most of the books in this series deal with someone using their psychic abilities to do harm. So why is anyone who's concerned about that possibility a prejudiced nutjob?

I'm assuming the focus of any future story lines will be on those who take their concerns to murder and mayhem, but there's plenty here to suggest that we're supposed to believe leeriness of these walking potential WMDs is "prejudice", "narrow mindedness", "superstitious". Frankly, anyone with half a brain would say WTF and never stop saying it if one day psychic abilities like these were confirmed. And on top of it, many of them are being trained by the government. That should make everyone feel safer.

In UF it is crucial that logic and reality be strictly adhered to and this through line simply doesn't make sense. People are afraid of them because they should be. What they do with that fear and the way the Psychs approach that completely justifiable fear (keep humanity safe, keep the loose cannon and evil Psychs on lock down, accept that they've introduced a potential catastrophe to civilization) is how the plot progresses. Otherwise it's just the author telling me what to think after several installments that show me otherwise.

Still, this is a great series so far. That is the only thing that has ever stood out to me as a possible problem and I only even bring it up because of the potential for story lines founded on this false premise.

If you haven't started Psy-Cop, you really should do it. If you like M/M romance and UF you'll really enjoy it.

I really liked this one, but some stuff was bothering me. I hated the fact that there were almost no sexscenes in this one. The previous book was so hot and then this one...I don't get it. The whole ghostv was kind of pissing me off too. I mean these books have been difficult enough to understand without all the extra ghostv stuff going on. Its starting to become less paranormal and more scifi. I also hated the ending. I mean WTF is Jacob thinking. He knows that Victor hates the fpmp...why would he do that to Victor. He doesn't even discuss it with him...oh what am I saying....they don't discuss shit ...I love them together but their relationship is very unhealthy and probably only based on sex, because they really don't talk to each other.

I don't know if I'm gonna read the last book (7)

Maybe saying goodbye now would be best, now that I still love Victor and Jacob.

Still 4 stars from me because Victor rocks !!!!!

Mel says

I was introduced to the PsyCop series last May. I was enthralled, read books one to five back to back and went on to vehemently pimp the series to anyone who would (or wouldn't) listen. Solid writing, interesting plot and humor. A world filled with ghost and psychics, but still so very real. Witty dialogues, hot sex and scenes so easy to visualize. And of course: Vic. Cynical, self deprecating Vic. What was not to love?

Safe to say I was highly anticipating the release of GhosTV... and I wasn't let down.

GhosTV has a different feel to it than the rest of the books. This time around, we're not with Vic on the job, but follow him in his downtime. Granted: there is another mystery to be solved (the missing of Lisa, si/no girl and Vic's best friend) but there's no Warwick, no Zig and no Carolyn. Instead Vic teams up with Jacob and together they travel to California, to visit PsyTrain. An unwelcome guest in the form of the always shabby FPMP agent Con Dreyfuss joins the party and he comes bearing gifts: a GhosTV.

The mystery plot was interesting, but like in the other books, at the end it's not really about the mystery itself but the journey it takes Vic on that makes the books so engaging.

The GhosTV played a key role in helping Vic learn more about his talents, and the scenes where he is wandering around in his astral form are priceless. I loved the different rules and appearances in the astral world, and I loved how it added a whole new layer to the characters.

The astral world also literally helped visualize the bond between Vic and Jacob. There was very little sex in this book (and the first sex scene wins the prize for most awkward but hot scene ever!) but the little moments between Vic and Jacob were extremely endearing and very romantic.

I had some minor peeves though. I was a bit confused by the reasoning behind the Five Faith cult because it didn't seem very consistent with the rest of the world building (as is described by Beanbag in her review). I was also surprised by a rather out of character action Jacob took by the end of the book (but I'll put it down to the cliff hanger ending). I was even more confused by the appeal of Lisa, because frankly: I didn't like her before the book and I liked her even less after finishing it.

But I console myself with the thought that I might have found a new infatuation: Con Dreyfuss. Yes, he is morally very ambiguous, yes he makes the okay sign way too many times, but the guy is just so interesting! And I can't help but picture him as a sexier version of The Dude.

All in all: GhosTV was another solid read and a great addition to the series, BUT it didn't manage to surpass Camp Hell as my favorite book of the series.

4,5 stars

Erin ? Proud Book Hoarder says

GhostTV takes the main characters of Vic and Jacob out of town and to a new psych center to investigate the disappearance of their friend Lisa. I'm happy to say recruiter and secret government head honcho Con came along.

The writing style continues to be fun and easy to read - I love the author's sense of humor in the smallest of things. It amused my Vic, who tends to be neurotic about stuff, gets an inferiority complex about his thin frame thanks to a bitchy comment from Jacob's sister. He then has to research working out, making me laugh out loud on more than one occasion. It's not plot important but it makes the character more real, and it's just plain fun.

Con isn't quite a good guy really but he's intriguing. I like his persistence, his secrets, and how uncomfortable Vic gets around him. There's a pretty big change with him at the end of the story that especially affects Jacob, shakes the series up a bit.

Vic gets to explore his uber-powerful powers even further and discovers new ways to tap into his abilities potential. Awesome.

On another plus side, these books have always been relatively short, especially for a slightly higher digital price, but this one is novel length and delivers on all the fronts for length.

I think I enjoyed this book so much not only because of the story, but the humor is just that funny and casually convincing. It works to make this series - and author - really shine.

And damn those printers - always out of ink!

4.4 Stars - Brilliant and hilarious fun once again

Book #6

Is this the craziest, weirdest, most interesting gay romantic GHOST series? Yeah, probably.

PsyCop can't be compared with anything else I've read in any case. I maybe didn't love, or understand so much, in the start but thereafter did I start to luckily happy-dancing every time I finished a book from this fantastic world.

Chicago nowadays or...?

The main characters are the PsyCop, Victor Bayne and his sexy lover, the detective Jacob Marks (..or:

“Mister Tall, Dark and Infuriating”). They started quite surprising a steaming hot relationship in the first book. By now are they both love-partners, colleagues as PsyCop's and since a time are they living together in an old cannery.

It's both interesting and fun to follow these two mens very odd and unpredictable relationship. ~ Steaming hot, inexplicably, surprisingly, outrageously wacky ...and it make these books even more unique for every new one. ~ Their way of express their feelings are also more delicate as the time goes.

”I never really understood how brave you are.”

In this sixth book GhosTV is the main focus —aside Vic's and Jacob's developing relationship— on the mysterious case about a missing friend, a ghosTV, to become astral and much more.

Vic's bestie friend (the former PsyCop) Lisa isn't answering phone calls or emails so our friends decide to go down to California to find out what's going on at that PsyTrain school where Lisa is.

‘I kept catching glimpses of the two of us in our suits and sunglasses, half a head taller than everyone around us, striding along like we had an appointment at the Pentagon to rid the world of an alien threat—and I had to admit, it was pretty damn cool.’

Unfortunately are they also accompanied by Vic's most hated nemesis, the creepy Constantine Dreyfuss. A man we already know from past books. Dreyfuss is an agent and the Director for FPMP (Federal Psychic Monitoring Program) in the northwest region. FPMP is a secret mysterious agency which is constantly spying on Vic (and his ilk). But maybe is Dreyfuss a better man than Vic assume? Or not?

...There is at least a very special TV delivered. A TV Victor wished for.

“If a ghost doesn’t leak through the floor of a building, why would it fall through the hull of a plane?”

Brilliant. No, seriously, I meant it—brilliant. Why didn’t ghosts fall through the floor, and keep on falling until they hit either the center of the earth, or maybe China?’

Another amusing fun and exiting spooky....

For me were the parts when Vic gush over his own poor physical status (this guy needs to boost his poor self-confidence) probably the best. Or maybe those scenes when Vic and Crash are funny and sweet to each other? Either way I don't think I ever laughed so much reading a PsyCop book as this time.

”Good thing all your friends are cops,” I said.

“Not all my friends.” He pressed his cheek to mine, and tilted his head slightly, so his skin brushed against mine. The bristle of his stubble dragging over my jaw sent a fresh bolt of gooseflesh down my arms. “Just the hot ones.”

YAY!! These PsyCop books are just better and better for every part I read. (Reviews for previous parts: (view spoiler)

Addictive good. I know I always repeat myself, haha. ~ Loved it, loved them. (Is it possible to love dear cranky Victor more then I do right now?)

Looking forward to the next part. (view spoiler)

I LIKE - Yeah, I'm in loooove by now

Santino Hassell says

I will do an overall review of the series here because I snuck and finished it when I was supposed to be doing other things.

These books are addictive and I love Vic. I love his voice and the way he views the world. I love his flaws and his dependency issues (okay, that sounded odd but you get me). I didn't care for the boyfriend at first, but even he slowly grew on me. I had some issues with a couple of the books, but overall, I think this series is fantastic. The characters feel authentic (even fake-bf as I call him, because in life there is always a semi-distant, self-absorbed fake-bf), the writing is AWESOME, the plot is intriguing, and I love how the supernatural stuff is woven in.

The subplots weren't always that mysterious or interesting, but I liked how the main couple went from being distant and almost uninvolved in each other's lives to being partners and equals.

I would say out of everything I've read in the past year or two, this is my favorite M/M series and contains my favorite books.

Sheri says

Wildly witty. Freaky fun. Spooky secrets.

Never a dull moment for my favorite supernatural couple and things kick it up a notch in the psychic world with this sixth installment in the series.

By now we know Vic pretty darn well.

Nearly half a dozen previous books have gifted us with the ins and outs of Victor Bayne.

We know (okay, okay, so maybe I adore and covet a bit too) Jacob through Vic's all-seeing eyes and how they fit together seamlessly.

What we don't know is who is watching them, what they want and where Lisa has disappeared to.

A whole heap of trouble tags after Vic and his goal of invisibility is fruitless. Conspiracy theory, bribes and mysterious evaporations thicken the plot.

A trip to PsyTrain tosses us into Psychic 101 and I seriously considered taking notes. Unfortunately, my notes would probably have matched Vic's and I was thankful things were broken down to the cliff notes version.

Astral projection?

Ectoplasm goo?

Yep, it was trippy to say the least.

Vic and Jacob partnered together 'on the job' was awesome! The strengths they pull off one another benefit them on the field, and they prove their badass ghost-fighting skills again and again. I was surprised with certain insecurities that came to light, but it only deepens my love for them.

It is quite refreshing to have a real couple with real bumps in the road, even when placed in such an unrealistic world.

JCP's writing never fails to hit all the high marks, and Vic's inner voice is a comical promise.

As much as this book is storyline driven it is still heavily focused on the characters, and that in my opinion, is a balance that few authors have mastered.

Though the steam factor may have simmered down, my attention has yet to falter and with the cliffy ending I am eagerly jumping with both feet into book 7. Seven, just wait till Jacob hears that!!

I'm sure I've said this before but, JCP makes me want to clutch this book and do a spiny twirl making a stupid eeeeeeeek sound.

I got so excited. So Happpeeeee ...and so pissed when real life got in my way!

I loved everything about this one, it was so much fun! Ghostly goop and all.

Jacob Mc Buffstuff is such a friggin dream boat isn't he? I love that Mr Muscle showed a vulnerable side, it just makes him SO much more appealing.

Victor freaking Bane!!! How can a character be so perfectly IMPERFECT ?!

I more than adore him; I kind of want to BE him but that would make it weird because I also think he's hot! It must be the new haircut (lol), cos all of a sudden I'm finding him quite smelt-worthy. I want to lick the scowl off his face and bury my nose in his hair and get my short legs all tangled up with his long skinny ones. I swear if JCP ever stops writing about him, I'm going to be devastated!

And Crash! There's never enough Crash (now that I know he's not a threat to JaVic .. not really, right?) I'm seriously thinking of taking my Reiki Mastership to the next level and learning to how cross over into the fictional realm, then me and Crash can do some nasty tantric in the astral because phew, that man is yummy. I really hope I get more Crash in Spook Squad fingers crossed

I don't think there was a character that I didn't like here. Even Dreyfuss (FPMP dude-Vic's nemesis) proved to intrigue and entertain me – what an interesting chap he's turned out to be!

The plot was brilliant! JCP is just so SMART!! I loved this one; it's one of my faves in the series so I'm rounding up.

I loved this book...I will be the first one to admit I'm head over heels for Vic and Jacob and have been waiting for this book desperately.

Vic's friend Lisa is missing and Jacob and him figure they need to make a trip to Psytrain to check things out...they hook up with Con Dreyfuss, Vic's least favorite guy. Once they get to California they find that Lisa and her roommate are missing. Con gets a little help and brings along a Ghostv to help out with the investigation...

Vic's abilities and tricks keep getting more clever and a hell of a more interesting. I was still getting surprised two thirds into it. There were great twists...and of course it was hilarious between Vic's new haircut, his preoccupation with getting in shape and the crazy shit he comes up with I was laughing A LOT.

There were also some great moments with Jacob, the guys is just SOLID. I just love how he loved Vic so unconditionally and has slowly brought Vic out of that self centered, numb haze and made him fall in love.

I love these books and hope to see some more romance maybe Crash and Con wink wink Can't wait for #7!

Amy Lane says

So much awesome!

I've loved these books for years. In each one, the alternate universe becomes more and more fully realized, and Victor's character emerges from the shadows of anti-hero-dom to the thin sunshine of the wistful hero.

In GhosTv, while searching frantically for his friend, Victor also experiences personal insecurity (not difficult, since his lover is a god) and a few empathic epiphanies with his arch-nemesis, the director of all things covert and psychic. He grows as a character, his powers grow and become more controlled in scope, and we get to see Victor, Jacob, and the director with a few of their defenses down. Jacob's old lover, Crash, makes a few memorable appearances (how could his appearances NOT be memorable?) and Victor finally (!) gets to see himself as Jacob does--the moment does not disappoint.

As a whole, this was a taut, exciting paranormal thriller with characters I always hate to leave. What's not to love?

Shile loves books says

"I'd blow someone for a valium," I said in Jacob's ear.

"Maybe he's got one... but try offering a hand-job first so you retain some leverage."

Book!

5 star for the story

5 stars for the Audiobook

Damn! this series keeps getting better and better.

-Vic is my one of my favorite characters. His snarky, sarcastic, self-deprecating humor is sooo good.

-The writing was good as usual, the mystery was so-so, but i still i liked it.

- Vic and Jacob got major chemistry going on and i enjoyed their interaction, though their communication sucks sometimes.

- The Ghost Tv and astral thing was creepy.

- Vic topping Jacob was hot and hilarious at the same time.

- I can't believe there was only one sex scene, i realized that when the book ended, i was so caught up in the story that i forgot about the sex.. I will let that go without a rant this time.

-Overall I enjoyed it! and was entertained for 12 hours.

The Book were Victor is Hungry
And has good Hair
And is generally all over Awesome.

A good one in this series. Great execution. JCP writes about perspective, seamlessly woven in, in both the real world and the other planes we encounter in this particular world. Perspective, how we see our selves, how we see others, how we see what's happening around us, how others see us, what others say to us and how this says more of how they see themselves and the world rather than what they see in us. Much food for thought if one is inclined to ponder.

This series is leading me places where I had not seen the characters going. It is all JCP's fault really, she obfuscates and changes the cards on the table. Very sleight of hand of her. Great though, I like that.

BR with Ingela and RA you're great as always....

This is a review for all the books/side stories so far because I read them all in a row.

I really like this series. I enjoy the characters-- all of them, in fact. I can't think offhand of one character I viscerally dislike.

I especially love Vic because he's awesome. I love his voice-- more than once I laughed at a line and a couple of times I even took the time to highlight it on my nook to be able to pull up later. I like that even though he's been through a lot of shit, even when he's thinking about it he's not dwelling on it in a way that doesn't make sense. If that makes sense.

I totally thought Jacob was someone else entirely for the first two books or so-- I kept thinking he was going to turn out to be a bad guy because the way he appeared and went full-on on Vic, and then kept seeming to be such a good guy, and such forth, made me distrust his motives. Kind of funny when you think about it. But I like Jacob a lot so I'm glad he isn't secretly evil after all.

It surprises me a bit that I like him as much as I do because I don't usually think super muscly dudes is that attractive, visually or as a mental image, but Jacob's such a sweetheart that his looks/physical presence is a nice counterpoint/layer that only adds to it.

Also does anyone else sometimes find themselves thinking of Monstroso from Venture Bros when they imagine him? lol

COME ON.

I digress.

I like that the female characters aren't a bunch of crazy bitches and I like Crash a lot too. And Maurice. And Dreyfuss.

So again. I enjoy the characters.

I think the books are definitely getting better as they go because the complexity has been increasing. Along with that, we've been getting more shades of spooky supernatural things, which makes me really happy because I enjoy that aspect of it. I look forward to the next book and at the moment am cursing myself for not waiting one damn week to start the series so that I could have just plowed on into the 7th as well.

Oh well. Live and learn.
