Three-year-old Luna loves to spend time with her older brother, Asher, and she wants to do everything he does. But when they sit down to draw pictures together, Luna feels upset that she can't do everything Asher can do. When she reacts in anger, Asher is sad and doesn't want to color with her anymore. How can she make things right again? With Mommy's help, Luna learns how to make amends for hurting her brother's feelings. Kids will love this sweet and relatable children's picture book for ages 3-5, whether they're familiar with sibling rivalry or are just learning to share and cooperate at daycare or preschool. Parents and teachers will appreciate the valuable lesson it teaches about empathy for others. Learning how to give a proper apology is an important life skill and this empathy book for toddlers is a must-have on any children's bookshelf.

Start With Sorry by PT Finch is an outstanding book that parents should read to their children. The story and illustrations work well together to create a must-have children's book, which children and their parents will enjoy. I believe children will develop a better understanding of their feelings: happiness, sadness, anger, hurt, jealousy, and regret. This story may help children to label their emotions and develop a better way to express their feelings. Start With Sorry also opens the door to discussing emotions and asking your own children questions like "Why do you think the little girl was angry? Why is the boy sad? Do you think the girl could have expressed her feelings differently?" The book demonstrates to children how to say sorry and forgive someone. Their mother guides them through a valuable lesson of understanding, empathy, cooperation, and an apology. Soon, the preschoolers learn how to work together to create a better drawing than before.

The illustrations in Start With Sorry are very well done by Gokhan Bas. They are very realistic images with shading, multiple colours, and shadows. Even his children's drawings look realistic as if they were drawn by preschoolers! Bas' drawings of facial expressions definitely illustrate the emotion that the children are experiencing at the moment. Perhaps we should have questions or a discussion page at the back of the book to open up a dialogue of the book and emotions. Start With Sorry should be in every daycare and preschool so children may develop a better comprehension of sibling rivalry, sharing, and handling their emotions.

Good turn of events, but too quickly resolved

This is nice, but it doesn't show HOW a kid can go from angry and destructive to empathetic and caring. Little Sister just suddenly goes from jealous to happy and suddenly is fine with coloring together. There's no talk about HOW a kid can learn to go from angry to calm, just that they should. Nice story, but not actually helpful to a struggling child.
