Lobstergirl says

Apparently all of this author's cookbooks contain the same nonsensical sentence:

"Cooking with your children generates activities are a great way of expressing themselves" [sic]

The author is also clearly using stock photos without attribution, probably without paying.

Every boy and girl should really be taught how to cook!! This simple children's cookbook will not only help you put your children on the road to their eventual independence but will be a great bonding experience for all of you. My Mom was not much of a cook--but my Dad sure was--and as for his Mom--well I spent many happy hours in her kitchen learning how to make (and eat) home made whipped cream, pies and sometimes she would let me help her season that delicious roast beef she made. My mouth is watering just thinking about it. My Mom's Mom was all about salads--fruit and veggie and setting the perfect table! She had a philosophy we should all adhere to " Eat to Live--Don't Live to Eat". She also made the most delicious stuffed cabbage--and although I don't remember watching her when I make it now it taste exactly like hers did.

I love that the recipes in this volume of the authors cookbook series are simple with easy to follow instructions. She even has the measurements in both metric and ounces (which in my case REALLY helps)- so no matter where in the world you live you will be able to measure correctly. She also lists all the utensils, food items etc needed and the safety precautions that should be taken. So what are you waiting for? Your children will love standing by your side and learning how to cook for themselves!
