Betty Lambert says

I really did enjoy this book. Its a quick read. This is about a cyborg prince who will be lord of his own solar system but he can't take claim until he marries. He has to find a girl who will be able to accept all his rings, and there are 5 rings, from among the neighboring systems. He finds the girl when he goes to a dating agency but ends up with the wrong one. She doesn't believe him at all. Quite the connumdrum. Lots of action and some passion but all in all a great story line. Recommend.

Loved it. My heart fluttered with the way they showed love progression

I really liked the Hero, his alien-ness was so interesting in that he absorbs the metals of his homeworld into his body. And when he finds his fated mated, he gets metal rings as a manifestation of the match. I didn't like the heroine so much but I guess I understood her reluctance to go right away with the Hero as she didn't sign up for a dating agency and she had no idea what he was talking about. I wanted more smexy times too.

Mojca says

The matriarch of the clan has bequeathed Sin, the fifth son of a fourth son of an eighth son, a solar system. The only condition to claim said solar system is that he gets a bride. And the easiest way to get a bride is to ask the Intergalactic Dating Agency for help.

Even before they reach Earth, Sin gets the good news. They found his match. And she's perfect for him...But when he goes to meet her, and take her with him onto his spaceship, he realizes Zoe has no idea what he's talking about. And she has no intention of being his bride. She has no intention of even dating him, least of all mating him.

So Sin does the gentleman-y thing (probably for the first time in his life) and leaves. But there's one peculiar thing about a fated match: you don't mess with Fate.

I loved this story. Loved it to bits. It had it all. Sexy hunk of a hero, a spunky heroine, sweet and hot romance, alien tech, fraternal rivalry and a little bit of suspense-driven damsel-in-distress-ing.

There weren't as many faux pas due to cultural differences and language barriers as in the previous two stories, and I must say it worked very well without that (unnecessary) repetition. The two leads were awesome, their first encounter funny, and their budding romance cute and sweet as heck, until it went hot. Really hot. Sin was a sweetheart with a merc mentality, but a heart of gold and a code of honor that knocked that merc-mentality out cold when the moment called for it. Zoe was your typical non-believer Earthling, but with a solid head on her shoulders and a sharp mind that didn't let her be blind or in denial for too long. She had her issues (thanks to the brick to the head incident) that held her back for the duration of the story, but it didn't make her whiny or idiotic. She actually came through as pragmatic and a realist, which is a breath of fresh air in a romance. Especially one involving drop-dead gorgeous aliens. ;)

The supporting cast didn't have much of a role, except to propel the story forward with nicely-timed explanations or expository scenes; I still loved Sin's two crew mates, Honey and Ivan, though. I hope their stories are the two remaining ones in this mini series, because I'd love to see more of them.

I loved the narrative style and voice, the pacing was spot-on (maybe the whole thing dragged a little in the second half, during the "suspense" part, but I didn't mind, since I knew the ending was near), the characters were rather well fleshed-out, and the premise worked well. Overall, a great story.

In an engaging mashup, Elsa Jade weaves in shifters, and cyborgs, two other hugely popular tropes. The result is the LOL antics of the couples paired by the Intergalactic Dating Agency -- where Tinder and Match.Com meet spaceships and blasters.

With space opera-esque good vs evil to leaven the romance, these books are fast paced, and relatively short at ~ 150-170 pages. To borrow from fellow author Rachel Chanticleer, these types of books are 'cotton-candy reads'. Sweet and satisfying but not particularly substantial. All the more fun for being a guilty pleasure.

*Note - my original review was meant for After Burn- the covers are similar.

Probably more like a 4.5, but I was entertained so I'm rounding up.

This was actually really quite good. I picked it up based on the title/series alone, expecting something super cheesy and totally cliched.

I kinda got that, but it was very well written and entertaining. The story was definitely in the specific genre, but the characters and setting were interesting, and frankly I just enjoyed it for what it was.

The only real issue I had was in the first few pages. There are a group of people on the bridge of a ship, 4-5 of them, and it was really confusing trying to keep up with who was talking, who was being described, etc. once I got past that, it was smooth sailing.

I really liked Zoe. She'd gone through some bad stuff (bad lite, nothing terrible or horrifying), but she'd healed herself up, was standing on her own, and was ready for an adventure, ready for something new.

She had some physical limitations from some injuries, and I liked that those weren't just hand waved away. They were just part of her character and was something to be aware of, not a major plot point to agonize over. Gave her more depth.

Sin (yes, that's his name), was for the most part built around the stereotypes you'd expect in this kind of book, but he also had some depth and while he had a commanding presence, he wasn't an asshole and was self aware enough to joke about his "high and mighty" tendencies.

A different sort of alien/cyborg type of story that I haven't read before. It held my attention, but something felt a little off to me, that I can't put my finger on what that is. The flow was smooth. The world building was alright, could have been a little better. There were a few places, I felt like Déjàvu or like I read snippets from another book at some point in the past year. I know I haven't read this before though. I did like the Hero - Sinn, he was interesting, in need of some humbling with dealing with Earther women, or atleast Zoe. But the heroine, Zoe, was a bit off putting to me & not because of her problems recovering from a brain injury. It was worth a read, even if it could have used some smoothing out.

Pamela(AllHoney) says

The first book in the Big Sky Alien Mail Order Brides and the third in the Intergalactic Dating Agency series by Elsa Jade. Sinclarion Fifth-Moon Jax or Sin, as he is called has come to Earth to find his match. He applied for a bride through the Intergalactic Dating Agency and she is in Montana. Zoe found a strange cube and is going to turn it in to the lost and found. But Sin finds her and thinks she is his mate. But Zoe refuses so...

It was entertaining and I will probably read more by this author. Loved that we met a bunch of characters that apparently have a story too.

Tammy says

First time reading from the author.

I liked the book cover and the description. It pulled me into wanting to read the story.

The first ten percent was a little slow, almost boring. It didn't seem to introduce us much to the characters, as I would have liked. But we get to know them more as we keep reading.

I thought the story gets better as the two meet. Sure she thinks he lost his marbles. The story even makes you smile in spots of the story. The pull of chemistry is there. Once they get to know each other a little, this helps to heat the chemistry between them up even more.

The story turns out to be a nice read. Few bumps here and there but not walls to stop someone like me from reading, if into Sci Fi Romance.

Got for an honest review.

Thank you for sharing your book with me.

Chappy says

I'm quite impressed with this book. First-time author for me and I'll be sure to read more.

I found it by looking into the Intergalactic Dating Agency series...this is book #3 but the 1st one by Elsa Jade.

Loved the concept of the mating rings and Sin's spaceship crew was reminiscent of Guardians of the Galaxy. Zoe was not a typical heroine...she's got some substance to her and some physical injuries that still plague her.

Kelly says

I picked up this book as part of an anthology and loved it so much I immediately put the other three books in the series on my wishlist. Sin was...complicated. The galaxy he lived in was complex. I was already onboard with those two things and then he started...I don't know what you call it. He was fricking forming mating rings out of his body. Let's just say that was the thing that made me go from like to love with the story.

I enjoy a strong man who finds his special someone and ends up so completely smitten he can't back away no matter how much he might think he needs to. Admittedly, Sin gave it a good try. He was willing to risk his life to give Zoe her freedom. I dunno. I just liked the guy. He was surly and growly and he went all in when he needed to.

Zoe, on the other hand, was...fragile, for lack of a better word. She's recovering from a brain injury that's completely derailed the life she had planned. While she was never meant to get pulled into the weirdness of the Intergalactic Dating Agency, she's drawn to Sin. I guess I should mention that for all her fragility, Zoe's not weak. She's still trying to adjust to the injury and it's throwing her off her stride.

Bottom line, I was entertained by Zoe and Sin and was ALL OVER his random piercings that appeared.
thumbs up

Just okay

This story is well written but I found that I didn't like the heroine much, and because of that, I found her unworthy of the hero. Aside from sex and being true mates, I am not sure the hero could see likeable qualities in her. There just wasn't time. Only my opinion of course.

Marta Cox says

Three and a half

My first book by this author but I can see that she clearly has a good imagination and more stories to tell. This took an unexpected turn as when Sin turned up collect his 'bride' she had absolutely no idea what on Earth he was talking about. Turns out someone else has applied to find their perfect match which leaves Sin in rather a quandary. Zoe is someone who has been through a lot and physically she is still having issues but that doesn't stop her from standing up to Sin, I liked this juxtaposition as even when fragile Zoe could be strong.

So if I liked it why not a higher rating? Well actually in spite of obvious and physical differences at times Sin just didn't strike me as particularly alien ! He's possibly a lot nicer than I wanted , his manner is sweet and even his crew whilst admittedly physically very different to humans just felt very ordinary. I think I must prefer the more dominant types that often appear in alien romance but I do hasten to reassure my fellow readers that this was an entertaining book and one I would recommend.

Gwen says

I really enjoyed this one it was short but sweet, and well written for a sci-fi romance! I was pleasantly surprised at the quality of this novel, although there was one element I could not take seriously. The author was trying too hard to put "sin" in everything. I mean seriously, SINclarion jax, SINners prayer, SINGilt rings. There are 470 occurrences of sin in this book. Yes, it is in one of the mc's names. BUT If a character is named something recognizable and suggestive like Sin, I don't need to see the name in all the other words the author comes up with.
