No Greater Love Janet MacLeod Trotter

Raised in the slums of Edwardian Tyneside, spirited and out-spoken Maggie Beaton joins the ranks of the suffragettes, determined to prove herself to her more wealthy comrades, in particular Alice Pearson, haughty daughter of the powerful local shipbuilder. But the consequences are devastating and Maggie is soon a fugitive, spurned by family and friends. Only militant trade unionist and passionate man, George Gordon, stands by her and for a blissful time his love is enough. But war is looming and Maggie's courage and endurance will be tested to the limit, in this heartbreakingly moving novel of one woman's fight for personal freedom. A special edition of THE SUFFRAGETTE novel with a new ending – to mark the centenary of the death of suffragette martyr, Emily Wilding Davison.

Liked reading this but the story is a bit obvious

Shirley Revill says

Storytelling at it's best. Highly recommended.

Kerry Deacon says

such a brilliant book, so hard to put down. really makes you realise how lucky we are today, and what people had to go through.

Angela McPherson says

Description inadequate as this book deals with a foot soldier in the WSPU, a suffragette, who undergoes much suffering for the cause. The book highlights the extent to which class and wealth were significant factors in the struggle for women's enfranchisement and the harsh life of poverty for ordinary women during the late 1800s early 1900s. The main characters were well drawn, although some of the artistic licence of the plot were just too coincidental. Nevertheless a good book to read to understand the issues that women faced at that period of history.

I've read with curiosity and enjoyment though it isnt written in my native language! I got inspired by Maggie's determination on her beliefs and targets...Sometimes i found her a bit selfish but i think she made the best decision when she stayed with John although her one true love to another men (George)and i wished John would have lived longer because he was a man that is hard to find!
