My friends! I do believe a mother-effing "Yaasssssss!!!" is in order!!

I can't wait!

MAY 9TH UPDATE:

Loved it! How could I not. There is something about Larissa Ione's writing that just does it for me. I love revisiting this world she's created and it was really great to see yet another realm added to it.

This story was a short one. The two main characters were really cool, each in their own way. It is just too bad this story is so short. The premise as well as the players were interesting enough to nicely work this out as a full length book. Instead to get everything in, some concessions had to be made causing it to feel a little bit rushed in places. But I can't deny that part of my disappointment is the fact that we didn't get to spend as much time in this world as I would have liked. It was just too damned short... And did I mention how short it was? lol

I so love this series. There is just something about that keeps drawing me to it. I'm not sure if its the writing, maybe the characters could be the characters, or it's all three. All I know is that it works for me and that makes me happy!

Oh Razr, how I feel for you. One mistake and....

You will just love him. He's so stand offish, or least he is with everyone but Jedda. Some things are just meant to be.

The interaction between these two are both touching and just so much fun. That moments she realizes what she's done to him will break your heart. You will love her for what a sweet elf she is. Even though helping him could/will mean her death she will do what she can to help.

Their ride isn't a easy one, but it's one that they both fight to be on. I love their story and found that it ended so well.

If you haven't read this series then you really need to. This is perfect beach reading material. You won't be able to put the books down.

It's always nice to be back in the Demonica world. I've been enjoying this mini series set in the Underworld and RAZR expands the world into the elf realm. This story was really cool and different!

Razr is an angel, not quite fallen but punished by Heaven and working in Hell until he can finish a mission he was part of. In order to get back to Heaven he needs to retrieve the missing Gems of Enoch. He finds one now belongs to Jedda and sets out to get the stone from her since it rightfully belong to him to begin with. But things are, as expected, more complicated than that. Larissa Ione always stands out for putting two people together that seem it would be impossible for them to work out a happy ending. And she does it effortlessly. I always look forward to her stories because of that and this was no different.

Jedda is a gem elf and she actually needs that gem to stay alive. What a clever addition to this set of creatures and a new realm to explore. And this book was the perfect place to put her in. I enjoyed Jedda's character a lot. She's not the tough heroine I'm used to loving, but she's still smart and witty and she has a soft and nurturing side as well. The Razr and Jedda relationship develops quite quickly and I thought they were adorable together. Not so much an explosion, but a sweet simmer.

While I miss the original setting of this series and UG, I always enjoy expanding the world and getting to know other players. I would love to see them mix and mingle a little bit more in the future... and I'm very curious about Billy Bob! Bring on the next one, I'm always ready for more from Ms. Ione.

I clicked for one and only reason which is Larrisa Ione!

It has been a while but her typical formula still works for me.

The typical bad guy who essentially get defeated by the tortured H and saves the h.

I like her unique world-building and pacing of the plot. The h was a little bland for me personality wise but I am not complaining. I still enjoyed her characteristics as well as the H's.

It works for me!

Dianne says

He was forced from Heaven for a mistake that cost his brothers their lives and the priceless gems that they carry. Razr is a fallen angel and he is determined to win back the use of his wings and re-enter the good graces of the Father, but first he must find his rare and beautiful diamond.

Jedda has a gift that mortals find uncanny, but for an elf, it is part of their nature. Rare and exotic gems call to her with their life-giving energy. Now Razr discovers that Jedda has the diamond he needs and she is not about to give it up. As the passion sizzles between these two they must learn to trust one another and become allies as opposed to deadly enemies. RAZR is filled with tension, mistrust and the urgency one fallen angel feels to redeem himself before it is too late. Feel yourself land in their world as Ms. Ione creates all of the atmosphere of a longer tome, plants enough energy to pull her readers in like a magnet and proves that short and sweet can be just as satisfying as a read four times as long!

Twisting, she looked over her shoulder at him, and in the glow of the nightlight from the bathroom, he was incredible. Passion and raw hunger lurked in his half-lidded eyes, his full lips parted on panting breaths, and she suddenly wanted that mouth on her body. Tasting her. Licking her. Kissing her

Have I mentioned how much I love Larissa Ione and her writing? Because man do I. SO HARD. Her world building is incredible. Her stories unfold in front of your eyes with the most stunning of visuals and I can never get enough. I've devoured her entire backlist and I love that she keeps giving us a taste of her Demonica world with these novellas.

And while this a somewhat short read at just around 120 pages, it's as satisfying as a full novel. I don't know how the woman is able to pack so much into those pages; the romance, the action, the mystery, the character development, all of it, but she does. And she does it WELL. I was hooked from the very first page.

Razr may say he's a fallen angel, but he hides a secret. A big one. He may be in Azagoth's service in the underworld, but he's also a man on the mission. He mistake in his past that cost him everything and the reason for his years of punishment is not just a haunting memory for him. It's a mistake that he continues to pay for and his salvation seems to be out of his grasp...until it isn't. Now he just needs to convince a female that may hold a deeper secret than him to help him locate it.

Jedda has a gift for finding precious gems. But her gift isn't one of luck; as a gem elf, it's essentially her life calling. When her gift lands her in some hot water with a fallen angel, trusting another one doesn't seem very smart...but there's just something about Razr that runs deeper than attraction.

Fans of this series are in for a treat with this one! Ione delivers her signature witty banter and steamy passion all wrapped around a totally addictive story line that's action packed from beginning to end. I loved the slow sizzle and burn between Razr and Jedda. I love Ione's heroines, because while having their weaknesses, these are not wilting wallflowers and Jedda was no exception. It was ridiculously cool to get a peek into the elfin world because that's not a species yet introduced in this super rich world building that the author has crafted. But as always, reading another installment has only whet my appetite and I already can't wait for more!

Sophia Triad says

Once upon a time, in the future...

Rarz or Razriel: An angel who is not exactly fallen or unfallen BUT he is still outside heaven and he is not allowed to return and he is still brutally punished with whipping even in times he least expects it.

Jedda: A gem elf who creates gems from her blood every time she bleeds and may be the reason for Razr's punishment, although truly she is a good girl with the best intentions. And Razr does not believe that she is not a demon. Because angels know everything and he knows that elves definitely do not exist.

Rarz and Jedda will be crazy in lust with each other from the second they meet. Jedda will feel compassion for him and he will want to look after her. Razr will think that there is no way Jedda is a ruthless thief. Could their feelings develop and these two lovely lonely beings fall in love?

It is amazing how greatly and brilliantly after so many years and so many books, the world building is still ongoing and the Demonica World is still expanding.

A new realm in this book (the elves realm), new interesting characters:

- A fallen angel, Shrike
- A few Memitim, Suzanne and Hawkyn
- An unfallen angel, Cipher (The Fabio wannabe)
- A few important dhampires, Galen, Rhona and Isla (the Wardens, the Triad)
- A lion shapeshifter who always comes back no matter how many times she dies, Lexi
- And Jim Bob of course, who is this guy?

And we visit both the Sheoul Gra, where Azagoth is still the badass boss (I absolutely love Azagoth!) and Scotland where the dhampires live. Dhampires are both vampires and werewolves –in case you don't remember. In Sin Undone, Conall Dearghul was a dhampire.

Most of the times, I am speechless when I read about all these magnificent creatures/monsters that the imagination of Larissa Ione's creates.

I just wish that we have again some full length novels. I always feel hungrier and unsatisfied when I finish her books lately. Not enough pages.

Favorite quote, which shows the sublime humor of the Demonica world:

"There's a saying in Heaven," he said lightly. "Angels keep their humor in their wings."

"So when they get cut off..."

"So does their humor." He shrugged. "Of course, fallen angels do grow wings eventually."

"But their sense of humor doesn't grow back?"

"Oh, it does. You just don't want to be on the funny side of it."

I am delighted to make my way back into the Demonica world, but also find myself disappointed that we are only getting small glimpses back into this world through the 1001 Dark Nights. We are introduced to a new species to this world while also meeting an angel who is not Fallen, Unfallen or even an angel still. A whole new love story to follow.

Review

Razr is another character in Azagoth's world (also known as the Grim Reaper). Not quite a Fallen Angel and not an Unfallen Angel, Razr has a mission he must complete to get his wings unbound and return to heaven. Razr is a battle angel, one of three, who were connected to 3 gems that had human counterparts that held them. A long time ago, he lost his gem and the human who held it to thieves. Heaven isn't so forgiving so he and his other two angels were jailed. Now he has a chance of getting all of it back if he can locate his diamond.

Jedda is a gem fairy, a species we haven't met in this series. In fact we haven't met any fairies at all, and fairies aren't demons. At the top of her field of geology, Jedda owns a rare gems jewelry store along with being able to locate the rarest of the rare gems, both cursed and natural. Now two Fallen Angels want her services. One for devious needs, while another for his own needs.

Now Jedda has a mission to find the Gems of Enoch for a dubious fallen angel who has also cursed her in the process. Razr is her counterpart, but can she trust him with knowledge of her species or even the knowledge she knows where the gems are located.

Jedda is an interesting mix of tough lady and woman who is not afraid of who she is...a woman. Gems give her powers, but also are needed for survival. She takes not shit off anyone, but she also has a caring side to her personality and it not cruel unless pushed into a corner.

Razr's above reproach. His wings are tightly bound and ache to be released. Punishments are not on a schedule, but he has a tattoo that at any moment can go off requiring him to be beaten. The hard the beating, the longer between punishments. The softer, the closer they are together. This would drive anyone nuts. His one true shining achievement is training Azagoth's Memitim (or children).

The two fall hard and fast into bed...or the wall, but they also have experiences that bring them closer. There is some suspense, but nothing that overshadowed the story of the characters. The story actually wraps up rather quickly, which is where my biggest disappointment lies. I wanted more.

Since the ending of Revenant, we have gotten short stories through the 1001 Dark Nights series that all revolve around the characters who live in in Sheoul-gra, Azagoth's Inner Sanctum. While I am enjoying these stories, I am also at a loss as to where the series is going or if it will go anywhere. So I just have to enjoy the story for what it is and now where it is leading too. Tanya Davis says

From New York Times and USA Today bestselling author Larissa Ione, comes RAZR, a passionate and spellbinding novella from the Demonica Underworld Series, brought to you by 1,001 Dark Nights ! Be sure you grab your copy today!

The characters of Larissa Ione's newest release, Razr, are definitely different from what we are used to in the Demonica world. Jedda is a gem elf and excuse my memory if I'm wrong here, but I hadn't heard of these creatures mentioned before. It made a lot of sense seeing how gems have so many different qualities just like personalities. I found the descriptions of how the stones worked for the gem elves really interesting. Absorbing the energy from a stone made perfect sense to me, but actually absorbing the stone into your body (not the way a certain character found his), was different. I felt the same way about the gems leaking from Jedda in tears and blood. I don't think I'd want to get on a scale with that many gems inside me!

Razr was just a regular angel that had really screwed up. His guilt is so overwhelming he relishes in his punishments. The time he has spent with Azagoth, Hades and Z have really taught him some lessons on demons and fallen angels. He is not the same angel he was before he made the biggest mistake of his life.

I'm thankful that Razr was a novella because the whole issue of gem bonding could have been expanded on. It was wide open for questions, speculations and conflict. In a way, I wanted more conflict on the issue between Razr and Jedda, but as the circumstances played out there was no time for hashing it out.

Razr was a quick jump into the Demonica world that I truly enjoyed. Jedda may not have been my favorite female character in this series, but she was really interesting. Learning about her and her kind brought a new side to the series that hadn't been explored before. I'm curious to see if we will get a novella with the other gem holder when the angels decide what to do with them and the gem itself.

This could definitely be read as a standalone as the novella is full of explanations on how the world works right from the start. You'll get the basics going in. Also, the appearances of previous characters is very minimal so you don't get too mixed up into their stories. Larissa Ione did a great job weaving her tale amongst the series but still being able to entice new readers that will not know the world.

The Excerpt

A lavender-scented breeze rustled through the trees as they entered a jungle forest unlike anything Razr had ever seen, and the deeper into the woods they went, the more he realized he had been wrong about this realm. The trees swayed with the fragrant wind, their limbs heavy with silver-laced leaves that sprinkled glitter with every breath of air. It was clean here, with no hint of industrialization. No smog, no chemicals, no man-made filth.

As they walked, the trees got taller and more ornate, and Jedda giggled when he stumbled to a stunned halt. Mushrooms littered the forest floor, lit up like little neon bulbs in every color imaginable. Tiny winged creatures zipped between them, bouncing off their caps before darting upward in sprays of sparks. And here, in this forest, the trees grew around gemstones of every shape and size, their trunks surrounding them like string art.

"This...is extraordinary."

"Yeah," she sighed. "It is."

"Do these gemstones provide energy?"

She nodded and continued down the path. "They power everything here. Every tree grows around a gem, and each gem grows bigger with the tree. In the center of my town there's an oak growing around an emerald the size of an elephant." She pointed ahead, where the forest parted to reveal a village of buildings fashioned from live trees and thick vines, and there, at the very center, was the elephant emerald.

He couldn't stop staring in awe as she led him through the village, which bustled with activity, from people hawking baked goods or tending to gardens to a blacksmith who set a gemstone into each weapon he crafted.

"They're enchanted stones," Jedda told him as they walked past. "His weapons sell for a mint in other elf realms and Sheoul."

"There are other elf realms?"

She inclined her head in greeting at an azure-haired female who passed them with a basket of apples. "There are two, both connected to this one. They're not allowed in Filneshara except to trade."

"Why not?"

She shrugged. "They're kind of aholes."

Man, he really needed to learn more about elves.

What happens when a fallen angel and a gem elf get together.... Pure magic!!! I love Larissa Iones Demonica underworld. So many awesome characters!! Razr is a fallen angel and jedda is a gem elf and they must work together to find the gems that were stolen from him and two other angels long ago, until then razr must endure regular beatings as part of his punishment . Razr knows that jedda is keeping something from him, but he can't help but be drawn to her. When the truth comes out will razr choose the redemption that he's waited so long for or will the love of a gem elf win the day!! Can't wait for my next trip to the demonic underworld!!

AJ says

4 stars!

The Demonica series is probably my all-time favourite paranormal series, so any new addition always has me scrambling to get my hands on it. And now Larissa Ione has introduced a whole new species to the Demonica universe – ELVES!

This is the fourth novella in the Demonica Underworld series, an off-shoot of the original books, featuring characters who live in Sheoul and Sheoul-Gra (the ‘hell’ realm and home of the Grim Reaper, Azagoth). These books don’t impact on the overall series story arc, but add depth to an already wonderfully complex and well-developed world, and I love any chance to revisit with these characters.

Razr was introduced in the last book of this series, Z. He is a fallen angel who lives and works in Sheoul-Gra as a punishment from Heaven, subjected to regular torture for a mistake that cost lives and lost priceless artefacts. Despite his circumstances, he has created a good life for himself and has good friends, but he is still desperate to return to Heaven and reclaim his wings, and if he can recover a missing gem, he will get his shot.

His search leads him to Jedda – a mystical creature with power that allows her to track down precious stones all over the world. She is the only one that can reclaim the gem for him, and when she is threatened by another fallen angel to hunt down the exact gem that Razr is looking for, he joins her on a mission which could finally bring him his freedom.

Razr and Jedda have insane chemistry from the very beginning. There’s a clear attraction and some sizzling (and imaginatively supernatural) sexy time, and the teasing and banter is fantastic as they get to know each other, learn about each other and share their worlds with each other.

“Tell you what. You prove you work for the Grim Reaper, and I’ll prove I’m an elf. Deal?”
“Deal.” Razr grinned, that killer one that made her ovaries clench. “Come on, Dobby. Let’s go.”

Things between them develop pretty quickly (as it has to in a novella), and I loved the two of them together. There’s fun and sex, but they also open up and share their painful pasts and their vulnerabilities, and I enjoyed the sweetness and emotion. But when secrets are revealed and ties from the past are uncovered, will the bond that they have formed be enough to survive the fallout?

Once again, Larissa Ione has created a fast paced, sexy, romantic, fun and intriguing story with a nice amount of action and all of the humour and intensity that I love about this series. I loved catching up with the other characters that inhabit the Demonica Underworld, and loved exploring the new part of the world as we get to know Jedda and learn the secrets of her race.

Short, fun and sexy and heavy on the paranormal, I loved it!

4 stars.

Sarah says

Razr isn't quite a fallen angel but he's been banished from heaven as part of his punishment for losing 3 of their most powerful weapons, the gems of Enoch. Razr's team made a huge mistake that cost the lives of the humans bonded to the gems and he's been paying for it ever since. His only chance of earning his way back to heaven is to recover the missing gems but that is easier said than done when he is also tasked with helping Azagoth training the memetim.

Jedda is a gem elf who spends most of her time in the human realm. Her innate ability to sense gems from a distance make her the ideal person to track the gems of Enoch but unfortunately for Razr another fallen angel got to her first and her life is now at risk if she doesn't hand over the gems to his enemy.

Razr is the fourth novella in the Demonica Underworld spin off series, which focuses on characters living in the underworld. The earlier stories focused on characters we'd become familiar with from the main Demonica books but now we're starting to see the series branch off in a different direction and I have to say I'm enjoying seeing where this goes. The addition of gem elves just shows there is a lot more to this world still waiting for us to explore it and I absolutely loved finding out more about Jedda. Gem elves have some really interesting characteristics and abilities so I can't wait to see what else Larissa Ione has in store for us.

As this is a novella the romance between Razr and Jedda develops quite quickly but it didn't feel rushed because of the way events unfolded. I enjoyed spending time with both of the main characters and thought there was a great connection between them. There was a lot of action to go along with the romance so I flew through this story in double time. It was also nice to see a bit more of Azagoth and the other underworld based characters and I'm looking forward to seeing whose story will be up next. I think this series still has a huge amount of potential and its definitely one of my favourites!

Title: Razr

4 unexpected stars

Well crap. Now i wish i had read each and every single book of the Demonica Underworld series from Larissa Ione. The last book i read from her happens to have been a previous Demonica novella from the 1001 Dark Nights lineup and i won't lie, i should have started back then, but the life happened and now i'm in my current predicament: at the 12th book in the series and still no further into it than the two books i've read so far. Needless to say that... wow. I'm astonished at how much i'm sure i've missed and yet didn't get the full face slap i would have expected in missing as much. I was still able to follow the gist of the story since it did explain the world of Demonica, but it didn't focus on it, rather bringing you to fall for Razr and Jedda and their battle for a cursed gem and their feelings for one another without destroying each other in the process.

4.5 sexy dreams

It was a quick read, which i'm not sure if i'm disappointed about it or relieved - why? Because i can only imagine was a full length novel would hold as information about everything that surrounds the Demonica Underworld. It must be a truly fascinating world, and one that will leave your reeling because that's what happened to me after reading this book. It was captivating and intriguing to say the least but it also got me wondering what else i missed. Is it really important to start from the very beginning to get the bigger picture? That's what i'm left debating and to figure out on my own while i can't praise another great addition to the series and 1001 Dark Nights lineup!
